Pakistanis fight back after mosque attack

By ASIF SHAHZAD
The Associated Press

ISLAMABAD — Hundreds of Pakistani tribesmen furious over a deadly suicide bombing at a mosque laid siege to several Taliban strongholds in their troubled northwestern region, killing at least 11 militants, officials said Sunday.

The weekend clashes appeared to be the latest evidence of growing anti-Taliban sentiment in U.S.-allied Pakistan, a shift that comes as suicide attacks have surged and the military wages an offensive in the nearby Swat Valley.

The attack on the mosque left 33 worshippers dead and wounded dozens more during Friday prayers, angering residents of the Haya Gai area of Upper Dir district.

Some 400 villagers banded together to attack five villages in the nearby Dhok Darra area that were known militant strongholds, said Atif-ur-Rehman, the district coordination officer.

The citizens' militia has occupied three of the villages since Saturday and was trying to push the Taliban out of the other two Sunday. Some 20 houses suspected of harboring Taliban were destroyed, he said.

At least 11 militants had died as of Sunday afternoon, district police Chief Ejaz Ahmad said. He said around 200 militants were putting up a tough fight but were surrounded by the villagers.

The government has encouraged local citizens to set up militias, known as lashkars, to oust Taliban fighters, especially in the regions that border Afghanistan where al-Qaida and the Taliban have hide-outs. But villagers' willingness to do so has often hinged on confidence that authorities will back them up if necessary.

With the army reporting advances against the Taliban in Swat that confidence appears to be growing.

Already, military officials say that as they've proceeded with the operation in Swat, local residents have grown increasingly cooperative, providing tips on militants' hide-outs and more.

Detained: Only slaying in Green Zone's 6 years of existence

Maj. Gen. Hussein Ali Kamal, a senior Iraqi Interior Ministry official, said the detained Americans were from the same company, but he declined to give more details because the investigation is ongoing.

Although Americans and others have been killed in rocket or mortar attacks in the Green Zone, Kitterman was believed to be the first American ever assassinated there since the protected area was established after the city fell to U.S. forces in April 2003.

Iraq assumed control of the Green Zone on Jan. 1 under a U.S.-Iraqi security agreement, taking primary responsibility from the Americans for searching vehicles and checking identity papers at entry checkpoints.

The Iraqis have begun removing some of the protective blast falls around the Green

Zone — part of a campaign to restore a sense of normalcy as violence in the city has waned.

Violence, however, continues.

A rocket or mortar slammed into the Green Zone on Sunday morning but no casualties were reported, according to the U.S. military.

The attack came little more than two weeks after an American was killed when a rocket struck the sprawling area that houses the U.S. Embassy and much of the Iraqi government.

Children, troops bond during Good Neighbor English Camp

BY JON RABIROFF

CAMP CASEY, South Korea — Army Pvt. 2nd Class Matt Theilicker was having trouble getting local student Park Hye-bin to focus on the song lyrics being taught Thursday at the 2nd Infantry Division's Good Neighbor English Camp.

She poked him in the head. She took his sunglasses and put them on her face. She grabbed a bunch of pencils in her hand and pretended they were a microphone into which she wanted him to sing.

The girl's antics may not have been the most conducive to learning the lyrics, but the bonding she did with the soldier was one of the bigger goals of the four-day camp that ended Friday.

"I want to teach the children American culture," said Sophia Lim, the USO's Area I program coordinator. "And, many of the soldiers ... just got here, and they don't know anything about Asian culture. So, they've gotten a good experience and learned about Korean culture and Asian culture together."

Theilicker said that despite the "hyperactive" nature of some of the children, "It's great to hang out with these little kids and teach them some English and learn their different personalities and how they live. They're cool to hang out with."

More than 30 children from 12 schools in the Camp Casey area attended the camp, along with a comparable number of soldiers. The camp is one of the Area I programs aimed at enhancing relations between the U.S. military and the local Korean community.

Lim, who has been involved in all seven 2nd ID

English camps to date, said the focus of the lessons has changed over time.

"When we started the English camp, it was just basic conversation and basic translation. Now our focus is useful stuff," she said, citing the slang found in such things as song lyrics and movies.

"Real talking," she said.

But it was clear to anyone looking on Thursday and Friday that children and soldiers alike were more into fun than adjectives and adverbs.

In between lessons, the group visited a variety of places, including the 2nd ID museum at Camp Red Cloud, Soyo-san Mountain and the Camp Casey Bowling Center.

Lee Yeon-soo, 15, said lunchtime was the highlight of her camp experience.

"The teachers are very kind," she said.

Spc. Christopher Jones sounded like an overgrown kid himself when he was asked to describe the camp experience.

"Oh man, it's great getting to know a kid from a different culture," he said, referring to "his" student, 13-year-old Lee Won-woo. "Over the week, he's grown attached to me. I've noticed him being a little more open to me, tickling me and all that stuff."

"It's real cool how they open up to you," Jones said. "You think they're different because of their culture, but they're just like American kids. It's been real fun."

Asked what the highlight of the camp experience was for him, the boy put his hand on Jones' back and said, "I have friends."

Once they hit stage, competitors at Okinawa event turn from their own worst critic to best salesman

BY DAVE ORNAUER
Stars and Stripes

KADENA AIR BASE, Okinawa — Bodybuilders live a mixed reality. On one hand, they serve as their own worst critic, believing there's always room to improve. On the other, they must unabashedly market themselves to the judges, prove that there is absolutely nobody better on stage at that moment.

"While you're training, you're your own worst enemy, but when you get here, you flip the switch," said Matthew Smilek, winner of the men's overall title in Sunday's 3rd Pacific Muscle Classic at Kadena's Keystone Theater. "You're everybody else's worst enemy and the judges' best friend."

Sunday's event was the first competition for Smilek, a Camp Schwab-based Marine. He has been lifting for five and a half years and said he trained for competition for two years.

"Pretty amazing," Smilek said of his victory.

Star Kirkwood of Kadena Air Base took the women's overall bodybuilding title and best poser award. Kim Keefer of Camp Foster won the women's overall figure title. Mitsuhiro Gima of Itoman was the men's masters (over-40) winner.

All told, 35 entrants competed for two and a half hours before more than 800 people.

Professional figure competitor Jackie Roberts and pro bodybuilder Hidetada Yamagishi wowed the crowd with guest posing routines midway through the competition.

The competitors completed their 90-second routines with apparent ease, but that skill, they say, is the result of months of strict dieting and a grueling regimen of weightlifting, stretching and other exercises.

"Every show I do is a culmination of all that training. You're on stage for maybe five or 10 minutes, but you're training for a year" or longer, said professional trainer Zoa Linsey of Torii Station, who's been competing for 10 years and coaching for three. She coached six women and two men who competed in the event.

The show itself is the "glamour part," Linsey said. "The rest of the time is spent in the weight room, hair pinned back, no make-up or tanning lotion and iPod blasting music as you lift."

"You're eating premeasured meals, maybe six or seven a day, high in protein and low on fat," Linsey said.

Not everybody subscribes to that, including Smilek, whose diet went against all conventional bodybuilding wisdom: "Burger King and Subway," he said.

"He's a genetic freak," said his coach, Jon Goll.

Whatever the diet, bodybuilding takes the firmest of dedication, said Jason Tingler, a Kadena-based technical sergeant who placed fourth the men's light-heavyweight division, Smilek's weight group.

Of those in the weight room, "you know which ones are committed," he said, adding that the hardest part is getting started.

"Make the commitment and be serious about it. We're our own worst critics. You never feel like you're ready, that there's always something else you can do to become better."

Hundreds of soldiers re-create air drop over northern France

By KEVIN DOUGHERTY
Stars and Stripes

SAINTE-MÈRE-ÉGLISE, France — On a field not far from where Ralph Manley and thousands of other American paratroopers jumped into history 65 years ago, soldiers of a different era symbolically took their turn in Normandy.

Nearly 400 U.S. soldiers parachuted Sunday into field a couple of miles outside of Sainte-Mère-Église, France, capping off several days of activities commemorating the 1944 Allied invasion of northern France, commonly known as D-Day. They were joined by more than 160 French, British and German soldiers.

Since 2004, Germany, whose military was vanquished in World War II, has played an increasing role in marking the end of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

On the Western Front, the dismantling of the German war machine began in Sainte-Mère-Église, the first French town liberated.

"I'm really honored to have jumped onto this drop zone," said Spc. Wesley Bird, a paratrooper with the 173rd Airborne Combat Brigade Team in Vicenza, Italy.

The parachute drop commenced despite strong winds and intermittent showers.

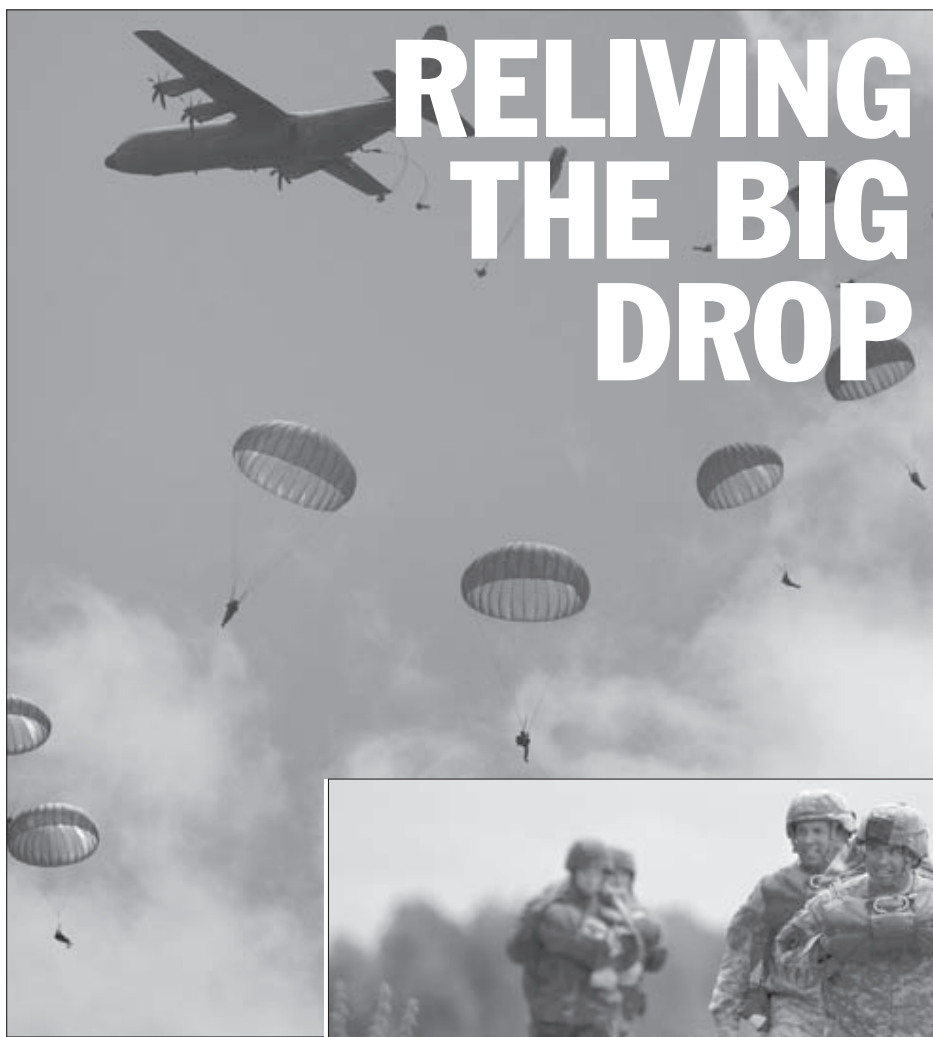

"It went really well," Bird said as he turned to reveal a soiled left shoulder. "The end was a little shitty," he laughed. It is, after all, a farmer's field where bovines roam.

A few jumpers had a bit rougher time of it.

Five American soldiers were injured and medically evacuated, and were treated at French hospitals. A German soldier apparently was stuck in a high tree. More details were still pending Sunday evening.

One Navy Seal landed in the crowd, though no one on the ground was injured. One person jokingly observed that, as a Seal, he was probably aiming for a small river. He made it. The large crowd appreciated the effort.

Conditions, however, were far, handed both of them baguettes. "Merci," Schultz said.

Taking it all in was Nancy Gamber of Hershey, Pa. Her 91-year-old father, Ralph, fought in the Battle of the Bulge in Bastogne, Belgium. Of more than 270 in his unit, only 18 survived the German counteroffensive in December 1944.

The reception that veterans, soldiers and Americans receive in this part of France astounded her. Most people in the States don't come close to responding this way to veterans and servicemembers, she said with chagrin.

"I just couldn't believe it," Gamber said of the French people in Normandy. "It blows my mind."

Sgt. 1st Class Robert Sciandra of the 75th Ranger Regiment would second that observation. He was part of the jump, struggled with the winds but arrived safely. A brief conversation soon turned to the wristband he wears bearing the name of Sgt. 1st Class Dave L. McDowell.

"He was a good friend of mine," Sciandra said.

McDowell was shot and killed in Afghanistan on April 28, 2008. Sciandra has also lost two other friends, one in Iraq and another during training in Germany. He was asked if he thought of McDowell on a festive day such as this.

"Absolutely," Sciandra said. "I think of all the guys we've lost over the years."

Imagine this: You are 20 years old, it's shortly after midnight and you are jumping out of plane in bad weather behind enemy lines. And you weigh 417 pounds, with equipment. Then the plane catches fire, maybe flak, because there was a lot of it the night of June 6, 1944, and you are one of five paratroopers to make it out of the plane alive. Thirteen weren't lucky; nor was the air crew.

"It was difficult until daylight," Manley said Sunday. "We were widely scattered. It kind of worked to our advantage because the Germans thought there were a million of us. We were everywhere, but not in large numbers."

Manley and other veterans who attended the various ceremonies are treated like royalty whenever they come to Normandy, though some waited until this year to return for the first time. At the drop zone Sunday, thousands of people from the region stood to watch the parachute drop.

Ekiden race sets new participation mark

By GRANT OKUBO

YOKOTA AIR BASE, JAPAN — C-130s weren't the only thing taking off from Yokota on Sunday as a long line of laced-up sneakers launched from the starting line for the annual Ekiden race.

More than 7,000 runners competed, an all-time high in the race's 25-year history. The Ekiden is broken up into three events. The main event features four-person teams competing in a 20 kilometer race, with each person running a 5-kilometer leg. There was also a 5-kilometer and a 2-kilometer race held Sunday for individuals.

The majority of Sunday's participants were Japanese and joining them were runners representing 14 other countries, said Jeffrey Dickerhoof, president of Yokota Striders Running Club and the event's host.

Additionally, servicemembers from near and far came to run the Ekiden.

Robert White, an airman with the 374th Operations Group, and his 8-year-old son, Jack, made this a family affair as they finished the kids' 2-kilometer race together.

Jack said he entered the race to win. And although he didn't place first, he said he had a good time running the race with his dad.

His dad said preparing for and running in the race allowed his family to band together.

"Everyone ran a good race," said Tedd Allen, a member of Naval Air Facility Atsugi's HSL-51 and one of the runners for "Team Musashi." For Allen, the sportsmanship displayed by all the runners was the highlight of the event, he said.

Clark Hickingbottom, a member of Team Musashi, tipped his hat to the many Japanese participating in costume.

"How do you even run in a C-3PO or Darth Vader costume in this heat?" Hickingbottom asked.

WWII MILITARY RE-ENACTORS TAKE

Re-enactors from across Europe descended upon French coastal towns for the 65th anniversary of D-Day.

Stars and Stripes

SAINTE-MÈRE-ÉGLISE, France — Standing by his Harley at the base of a linden tree, Pete Cuthbertson beamed like a proud papa as a steady stream of soldiers stepped up to fawn over his vintage motorcycle.

Not wanting to cut any historical corners, he outfitted the 1943 military police bike with all the right accessories, from a leather satchel to a fully loaded cloth tool kit. Heck, even the tire nozzle caps were real — steel, not rubber, thank you.

"They take a lot of pride in what they are doing," Sgt. 1st Class Jimmy Cannon, a Green Beret, said as he stood over the Harley 750 WLA.

And it wasn't just Cuthbertson's ride that was right with the world either. He wore an authentic World War II uniform, vintage brown boots, a khaki hat and boxer shorts. But more on that last item later.

Cuthbertson came to Normandy, France, this past weekend with a posse of imposers, though nobody seemed to mind their presence. Cannon didn't care, nor did his colleague, Sgt. Thomas DeMoss.

"It's honoring the memory of the people before them," DeMoss said of military re-enactors. "They are creating the atmosphere of how it was."

Military re-enactors are a big part of any World War II commemoration in Europe, particularly those devoted to the United States. But who are these people and what motivates them?

Jenny Thompson has spent more than a decade researching this phenomenon — or hobby, as some call it — for her doctoral thesis in American studies. She went on to write a book on the subject, called "War Games: Inside the World of Twentieth-Century Re-enactors."

"A lot of re-enactors have relatives who fought in a war, especially World War II,"

Thompson said by phone from her home in Evanston, Ill.

War, she added, "is something they are just fascinated about in general." For a lot of re-enactors, they want to experience the discomfort, hardship and fatigue. They want to steer away from the Hollywood heroics.

Relatives of war veterans typically fall into one of two camps: those with vets willing to talk about their experiences and those whose forebears find them too painful to recount. The talkers often spur further interest, while the silent types leave their relatives wanting, creating "a deep mystery," Thompson said.

Hans Van den Driessche's father was called to service by the Belgian government in the early days of World War II. But the Germans conquered his country so swiftly that he never had a chance to don a uniform.

Van den Driessche briefly served in the Belgian military when he came of age, but his interest in World War II well predated that. As a boy he played with toy soldiers. As an adult he plays around with grown-up soldiers, visiting re-enactment events and tooling around in one of the two period vehicles or four motorcycles he owns. He always dresses the part, of course.

"The Second World War is my hobby," said Van den Driessche, who has been at it for 21 years. "I like history. I probably have enough uniforms for 50 people."

Thompson said this type of passion and attention to detail is something she experienced when she was researching re-enactors back in the United States, though not all of them are as precise. To understand re-enactors better, she donned uniforms, attended events and took on various roles, such as a prisoner of war or an ambulance driver. The same is true in Europe.

Clothes, cars, kits and anything else related to that era are in play. Incredibly, some participants even own World War II planes and tanks. They fight mock battles and willingly endure the hardships associated with the battlefield. A few years back in Bastogne, Belgium, a cadre of re-enactors attending a Battle of the Bulge commemoration in December awoke in the middle of the night to conduct a four-hour foot patrol.

Thompson was at one event where a group had fashioned their own mail. To keep it real, the envelopes had been opened and portions of the letters redacted. Mingling about was a combat correspondent.

"It's a very interesting group of people," Thompson said. "Some people might think it's a little odd. (Re-enactors) are more complicated than meets the eye."

She found the demographics captivating. Most are predominately white men, though more women are getting in the mood. The average age is about 38. They tend to be slightly more educated than the mean, and, contrary to conventional wisdom, they come from a wide range of political views.

There are doctors, economists, cops, construction workers, college students. They give new tilt to the "weekend warrior" phrase. Van den Driessche, for example, owns a confectionary business, while Cuthbertson, the re-enactor with the motorcycle in Sainte-Mère-Église's square, designs and makes furniture.

Cuthbertson's uniform is authentic "down to his boxers," said Cannon of the 1st Battalion, 10th Special Forces Group in Stuttgart, Germany. "They don't play around, and the girls fancy them."

The bearer of those old boxer shorts said he was at an event when a female admirer approached him. Cuthbertson said she couldn't believe his get-up, and was floored when he told her he had authentic underwear on. She asked to see it.

"I told her, 'You can see it later,' and she took me up on it," Cuthbertson said with a broad smile. "How many times can a modern girl go back to the 1940s?"

U.S., Iraqi soldiers work to fix supply chain

By TERI WEAVER
Stars and Stripes

SALMAN PAK, Iraq — First Lt. Ahmed al-Dulmly holds a rolled up piece of paper in his hand.

On it are handwritten requests to his Iraqi army headquarters for parts for American-made Humvees and pickup trucks used by the more than 2,000 soldiers with the Iraqi army's 45th Brigade, which patrols just southeast of Baghdad's city limits.

"I know it is a lie," says al-Dulmly, the brigade's supply officer, as he shakes the paper in his hand. "I don't even know where the paperwork is going to."

Neither do the Americans. That's why the U.S. Army has fielded new training squads — Logistics Training Advisory Teams — to help officers such as al-Dulmly fix the broken Iraqi military supply chain.

It's a daunting task. In the years that the U.S. military has worked to train Iraqi troops to secure their own country, they've also handed over millions of supplies in vehicles, weapons, computers, radios, uniforms, boots.

At the same time, American commanders have pushed the Iraqis to take this equipment, and their own money, to establish an independent supply chain.

That push has proved difficult at best, both Iraqi and American troops say.

Some Iraqi units get fuel based on how many vehicles they have, not how much they drive. Some get supplies based on tribal influences or personal connections. Some get only 10 to 20 percent of what they request, so officers like al-Dulmly ask for many times more than what they need.

One U.S. commander said he's seen Iraqi officers work to obtain 30 signatures on a single request in order to get a shipment of fuel. Another said he's seen Iraqi medical units who have trouble getting light bulbs, much less medicines.

Maj. Gregory Osborn is the leader of an Army military training team working with the 45th Brigade, which just formed in December. The logistics team is meant to supplement the Iraqi unit's work, as he explained to the brigade's deputy commander last week.

"We're trying to get your system to work and not rely on our system," Osborn said.

Getting the Iraqis to buy in is part of the battle. Twice last week, Iraqi soldiers didn't show up for training sessions at the nearby American base. They had reasons. They were in the midst of their own unit inspection, and then many of their soldiers took their monthly 10-day leave.

The logistics teams are trying to persuade officers such as al-Dulmly to be-

In tandem with the logistics team, the U.S. soldiers who work with the 45th Brigade each day are trying to teach them about their equipment. Staff Sgt. Bryan Leeds, a mechanic with the 1st Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, looks under the hood of a Humvee. It has two dead batteries, but the Iraqi mechanics want to know how to check its fluids and test the transmission.

lieve in the paperwork. Above him, other U.S. advisers are trying to track requests up and down the chain. They work to persuade Iraqi leaders to push out supplies based on needs rather than on wants or personal whims.

Sgt. 1st Class Eridana Reinoso is part of the logistics team working with the 45th Brigade. On Thursday, her team visited the brigade's headquarters in Salman Pak for the second time. They met with Iraqi officers and soldiers in charge of medicine, weaponry and vehicles. The communications officer was on leave.

Reinoso met with an Iraqi soldier newly appointed to care for the brigade's stock of rifles and ammunition. He said the unit has made requests for weapons lockers, to no avail. She asked him for a copy of the form, which he couldn't produce.

"He's not going to get anything if he doesn't request it," she says.

Reinoso knows that there's only so much her team and the Iraqi soldiers can do at their level. So part of the team's task is to help the Iraqis better use what they have and improve unit-level inventory systems.

When she visits the brigade's personnel office, the two Iraqi soldiers tell her they need help with the two computers on their desks. They want to know how to use Microsoft Word and Excel.

"OK," she says, writing it down. "We can do that."

Other members of the team make lists of other training needs, including those of the brigade's medical unit.

"It's simple stuff," said 1st Lt. Michael West-Dominguez, the leader of the logistics team, who served as an Army medic before getting his commission. Some Iraqi medics don't know basic first aid — putting on a tourniquet, starting an IV, sealing a wound.

The biggest need, al-Dulmly and others say, is vehicle maintenance.

"They are used to the Russian stuff," says Staff Sgt. Bryan Leeds, a mechanic with the 1st Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, which works closely with the 45th Brigade and its fleet of American-made trucks. "Ford and GM and Dodge — you can't get more American than that."

The local Iraqi fuel clogs those American-made engines.

The computer-based transmissions in pickup trucks and Humvees require special equipment and an English-language manual to diagnosis problems.

A Humvee, with proper care, can last 20 years. But after every use, its suspension system needs to be checked, and often, tightened. If the bolts come loose, the chassis will wear down quickly.

"People underestimate them," said Staff Sgt. John Snyder, another mechanic with the paratrooper battalion, referring to Iraqi mechanics. He said most of those he's met know what they are doing. They just don't yet understand the more complicated American systems.

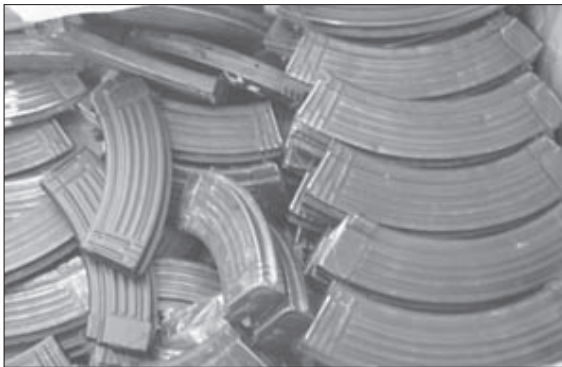

For officers like al-Dulmly, he's just trying to understand his own supply system.

"This is my job. I have to be more serious about it," al-Dulmly says through a translator. "But I hate my job because it's a lie."

E-mail Teri Weaver at: weavert@pstripes.osd.mil

Left: The Iraqi supply chain is dependent on handwritten paperwork that, in some cases, requires more than three dozen signatures to approve a replenishment request. This handwritten log shows the 45th Brigade's weapons. Across the street, in the brigade's personnel office, are two computers that are unused. The soldiers need training on Microsoft Word and Excel. Center: As with the vehicles, much of the weaponry used by soldiers with the Iraqi 45th Brigade is U.S.-made. Right: For years, the Iraqis relied on Russian-made equipment such as these AK-47s. They know how to fix and maintain Russian trucks; it's the American-made vehicles with their computer-based diagnostic tests that are giving them trouble.

16 killed in two-hour shootout in Mexico

By NATALIA PARRA
The Associated Press

ACAPULCO, Mexico — Soldiers fought for two hours with armed men apparently holding police hostage at a house in Acapulco, leaving one soldier and 15 gunmen dead, a military official said Sunday.

Three soldiers and three Mexican bystanders were wounded. Several Mexican tourists were evacuated from small hotels in the old Acapulco neighborhood, which was once popular with Hollywood stars but has since become run-down.

The gunbattle erupted Saturday night when soldiers received a tip about the presence of armed men at a gated house, said an army colonel who led the operation and spoke on condition of anonymity for security reasons.

The gunmen opened fire and hurled some 50 grenades at soldiers who arrived at the house, according to the colonel, who wore a ski mask as he led reporters through the scene.

Several gunmen tried to flee but crashed their car into a Humvee blocking the gate. At one point during the fighting, armed men with grenades arrived in a car to reinforce the gunmen in the house, but they died in the shooting, the colonel said.

Soldiers found four Guerrero state police officers handcuffed inside the garage of the house, the colonel said. The officers, who were still bound and sitting the floor when reporters arrived, said they were being held captive by the gunmen, he said.

The soldiers did not know the police were inside when the shootout began, and the colonel said their claims would be investigated.

"We found them like this, handcuffed, and they say they were kidnapped. So, if they were kidnapped, as they say, then we rescued them," the colonel said, pointing to the four men.

Residents cowered inside their homes and several small, low-cost hotels while the fighting lasted.

When the shooting subsided, several people too scared to stay in the area were evacuated in an ambulance.

Brazil recovers 4 more bodies from jet crash

By MARCO SIBAJA

The Associated Press

REIFE, Brazil — Four more bodies were found Sunday bobbing in the ocean near the spot where an Air France jet is believed to have crashed a week ago, bringing the total number of bodies plucked from the water to six, Brazil's military said.

A French helicopter crew retrieved one body, and a Brazilian-led search team recovered three others. None was immediately identified.

Authorities said pilots searching the mid-Atlantic also spotted additional bodies from the air and are sending ships to recover them, Brazilian navy Capt. Giucemar Tabosa Cardoso said.

The number or approximate number of additional bodies in the water was not disclosed. Brazil's military is not releasing information about bodies or debris that have not been taken aboard ships, after sea trash was mistaken last week for a cargo pallet from the plane, prompting criticism.

Flight 447 disappeared and likely broke up in midair in turbulent weather May 31 during a flight from Rio de Janeiro to Paris with 228 people aboard — all now presumed dead.

The investigation is increasingly focused on whether external instruments on the Airbus A330 may have iced over, confusing speed sensors and leading computers to set the plane's speed too fast or slow — a potentially deadly mistake.

ing the disaster said airspeed instruments on the plane had not been replaced as the maker had recommended, but cautioned that it was too early to draw conclusions about what role that may have played in the crash.

The agency, BEA, said the plane received inconsistent air-speed readings from different instruments as it struggled in a massive thunderstorm.

Brazilian investigators are searching a zone of several hundred square miles roughly 400 miles northeast of the Fernando de Noronha islands off Brazil's northern coast.

N. Korea warns the South over war moves

By WILLIAM FOREMAN
The Associated Press

SEOUL — North Korea accused the South of sending patrol boats into its waters near a disputed western sea border and warned that any war moves would be "shattered to smithereens."

The threat Saturday by the communist government's National Peace Committee came as many worried that a sea clash could quickly escalate into a major confrontation amid soaring tensions over the North's recent nuclear and missile tests. Deadly battles occurred in the area in 1999 and 2002.

Without providing specifics, the North's official Korean Central News Agency alleged that the patrol boats were crossing into its territorial waters on daily missions.

It said such aggressors would be dealt "merciless punishment that will be beyond imagination," and that "war moves will be shattered to smithereens."

South Korea rejected the North's allegation. Just two days earlier, the South accused the North of sending a patrol boat across its sea border in the same area. The boat turned back without incident after a 50-minute standoff with the South's naval ships, the military said.

Earlier Saturday, South Korean President Lee Myung-bak said in a nationally televised Memorial Day speech that Seoul would not be cowed by the North's nuclear and missile threats.

Families burying 38 children killed in day care fire

By OLGA R. RODRIGUEZ
The Associated Press

HERMOSILLO, Mexico — Grieving parents buried their children Sunday after a devastating day care fire killed 38 infants and toddlers in a tragedy that stunned Mexico and prompted its president to promise a thorough investigation.

Funeral processions drove slowly to churches in the northwestern city of Hermosillo decorated with balloons and flowers.

The family of 2-year-old Maria Magdalena Millan dropped white roses on her casket and attached a Dora the Explorer balloon to the cross marking her grave at one of the first funerals held on Saturday.

"I love you and I don't want to leave you here!" her mother screamed.

President Felipe Calderon arrived in the northwestern Mexican city late Saturday to console the injured. He wished surviving children a speedy recovery and promised families full support from his health ministry and a thorough investigation into the cause of a tragedy that he said all Mexicans felt.

ALEXANDRE MENEGHINI/AP

Newly dug graves for children killed during a fire in a day care center are seen at a cemetery in Hermosillo, Mexico, on Saturday.

"I want to say to the mothers and fathers of the little ones who died that we share their profound sadness," Calderon said earlier in the day.

The death toll rose to 38 on Saturday after three children died in hospitals, according to Sonora state health secretary Raymundo Lopez Vucovich. Most of the victims had died of organ collapse caused by smoke inhalation, he said.

The fire initially spread from an adjoining tire and car warehouse to the roof of the ABC day care and sent flames raining down on the young children. Fire officials still don't know how it started.

Delfina Ruelas, 60, said her grandchild German Leon died of his burns on Saturday, three days after his fourth birthday.

Ruelas and her husband saw televised reports about the fire Friday and rushed over.

"I thought he wasn't that burned and that we would find him OK, but he was very burned," said Ruelas, dissolving into tears outside the morgue in the northern city of Hermosillo, where she waited with 30 other relatives. "They operated on him yesterday, and he held on, but today he couldn't."

Noe Velasquez, an employee at a nearby auto parts store who helped pull out five toddlers, said one of the children's fathers had rammed his pickup truck through a wall to get to the children.

Militant group gets into matchmaking

HOOKUPS

By DIAA HADID
The Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — At 29, Tahani is considered a spinster by the standards of deeply conservative Gaza. So in her search for a husband, she turned for help to the best in the marriage business: the Islamic militant group Hamas.

"I gaze at all the men on the street and think, 'Oh God, isn't there just one for me?'" said the young woman with dark skin and honey-colored eyes, set off by a maroon headscarf.

Her application is among 287 from single women in the files of the Tayseer Association for Marriage and Development in Gaza. Photographs stapled to the files show Muslim women in headscarves, some wearing makeup, some smiling, others looking startled. They all want a husband, and the Hamas loyalists running the association are intent on finding a man for each.

Despite its fearsome reputation elsewhere, Hamas is known here for its cradle-to-grave welfare programs for the poor. It is a cornerstone of its political support in Gaza, where poverty is deepening as Israel and Egypt maintain an almost two-year blockade of the Hamas-run territory. Now, the group is branching out into matters of the heart.

"This is our vision of humanitarian work," said Wael Zard, director of the Tayseer association. "This makes people close to Hamas and makes Hamas close to the people."

While Tayseer's matchmaking service helps both men and women, it is particularly important for women since staying single is a cruel fate for them in Gaza. They are often treated as unpaid maids by their extended families and, says Gaza sociologist Naser Mahdi, increasing economic hardship has made the marriage market even harsher.

About 40 marriages have been arranged since Tayseer opened its matchmaking department in 2007. Most women apply in secret because it's taboo for women in Gaza to seek husbands outside the traditional route.

Tahani, who spoke on condition that only her first name be used because she is using the service without her family knowing, said she turned to Tayseer a year ago. Her mother died when Tahani was young, and none of her relatives were helping her find a groom.

The young woman said she became more determined to find a husband after Israel's three-week war on Hamas, which ended in January.

"My brothers held their wives when they were scared. I felt lonely," said Tahani, a university graduate in social work.

Most women are shy when they first come in the door, said Tayseer matchmaker Nisrin Khalil, 21.

The applicants, who pay a fee of $10-$70, are divided into categories according to their eligibility. Women under 25 are easiest to marry off; more challenging are women over 30 and divorcees.

"If we see a girl that appears to match [a man], but she's not physically what he wants, I'll call him and say, 'Well, she's pretty, but she's dark.' Or 'she's short, but she's white.' We encourage them to be a bit more realistic," Khalil said.

The one other matchmaking service in Gaza is little-used. The Tayseer association was originally founded to fund and organize mass weddings, a service for poor or disabled Gazans who often can't afford the costs of a ceremony.

While Hamas is considered a terrorist group in the West because of its attacks on Israel — including suicide bombings — it also provides Gaza's poor with food coupons, medical care and other services. Its social network helped make the group popular, gaining it victory over its Palestinian rival Fatah in 2006 parliamentary elections.

Rania Hijazi, 29, applied to Tayseer in March 2008 and two months later married Ashraf Farahat, 36. She said she went to the service because she feared her family's matchmaking efforts were going nowhere.

"I felt embarrassed when I applied," said Hijazi, who has since become a mother. "But then I said, 'I won't find a man any other way' and I tried to be strong."

Plenty of other women are waiting. "I want to have a man, a husband," said Tahani. "I don't think that's a selfish request."

Western parties claim victory in Lebanon voting

The Associated Press

BEIRUT — Lebanon's pro-Western coalition declared victory early Monday, as local television stations reported the faction had successfully fended off a serious challenge by the Shiite militant group Hezbollah and its allies to grab the majority in parliament.

Official results for Sunday's election were not expected until later Monday, but the winners were already celebrating by shooting in the air, setting off fireworks and driving around in honking motorcades.

The election was an early test of President Barack Obama's efforts to forge Middle East peace. A win by Hezbollah would have boosted the influence of its backers Iran and Syria and risked pushing one of the region's most volatile nations into more conflict with Israel.

Lebanese Broadcasting Corporation, a leading private Christian TV station, projected the pro-Western coalition to win 67 seats in the next parliament, with 52 for Hezbollah and its allies, two for independents and seven undecided.

WIN YOUR SIGNED COPY!

Stripes Book Club and Dutton, a member of Penguin Group (USA) Inc., are proud to offer you a chance to win a signed copy of Meg Gardiner's THE MEMORY COLLECTOR.

Forensic psychiatrist Jo Beckett's specialty is the psychological autopsy—an investigation into a person's life to determine whether a death was natural, accidental, suicide, or homicide. She calls herself a dead-shrinker instead of a head-shrinker: The silence of her "patients" is a key part of the job's attraction. When Jo is asked to do a psychological autopsy on a living person—one with a suspect memory who can't be trusted to participate in his own medical care—she knows all her skills will be put to the test.

Jo is called to the scene of an aircraft inbound from London to help deal with a passenger who is behaving erratically. She figures out that he's got anterograde amnesia, and can't form new memories. As his thoughts drift away like tendrils of smoke, Jo finds herself racing to save a patient who can walk and talk and yet can't help Jo figure out just what happened to him.

"The next suspense superstar."

"If you read Sue Grafton, Lee Child, Janet Evanovich, Michael Connelly, or Nelson DeMille, you're going to think Meg Gardiner is a gift from heaven."

High court asked to block Chrysler sale

By MARK SHERMAN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Three Indiana state pension and construction funds want the Supreme Court to block Chrysler's sale to Fiat so they can pursue an appeal in hopes of getting a better deal.

Also filing emergency papers at the high court Sunday were lawyers representing consumer groups and individuals with product-related lawsuits.

An appeals court in New York approved the sale Friday but gave objectors until Monday afternoon to try to get the Supreme Court to intervene. Chrysler LLC wants to sell the bulk of its assets to a group led by Italy's Fiat Group SpA as part of its plan to emerge from bankruptcy protection.

The Indiana State Police Pension Fund, the Indiana Teacher's Retirement Fund and the state's Major Moves Construction Fund claim the deal unfairly favors the interests of Chrysler's unsecured stakeholders ahead of those of secured debtholders such as the funds.

The funds also challenged the constitutionality of the Treasury Department's use of money from the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP) to supply Chrysler's bankruptcy protection financing. They say the government did so without congressional authority.

Justice lawyers sought limits on interrogations

By DEVLIN BARRETT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senior Justice Department lawyers in 2005 sought to limit tough interrogation tactics against terror suspects, but were overruled.

James Comey, then the No. 2 official at the Justice Department, tried to convince Attorney General Alberto Gonzales that some of the tactics were wrong and would eventually damage the reputation of the department.

The New York Times reported Comey sent an e-mail at the time describing his efforts to curtail the use and combination of the tactics that critics call torture.

"I told him the people who were applying pressure now would not be there when the (expletive) hit the fan," Comey wrote in an e-mail obtained by the Times. "It would be Alberto Gonzales in the bull's-eye. I told him it was my job to protect the department and the AG, and that I could not agree to this because it was wrong."

A person familiar with Comey's concerns, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that Comey sought to put limits on the use of the interrogation tactics because he argued they were wrong on moral and ethical grounds, and they didn't work.

The Justice Department has been conducting a long-running investigation into the conduct of the lawyers who wrote legal memos authorizing the CIA to use a variety of harsh measures, including sleep deprivation, slamming suspects into walls and waterboarding — a form of simulated drowning — as means to make those terror suspects talk.

Suspect in Kan. shooting warns of more violence

The Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. — The man charged in the shooting death of abortion provider Dr. George Tiller warned Sunday that more violence is possible.

Scott Roeder, being held on charges of first-degree murder and aggravated assault in Tiller's killing one week ago, called The Associated Press from the Sedgwick County jail.

Tiller, whose Wichita clinic was among only a few in the U.S. performing third-trimester abortions, was shot while serving as an usher at the Lutheran church he attended.

"I know there are many other similar events planned around the country as long as abortion remains legal," Roeder said.

He would not elaborate.

Tiller's clinic in Wichita had been a target of regular demonstrations by abortion opponents. Most were peaceful, but his clinic was bombed in 1986 and he was shot in both arms in 1993.

A funeral was held Saturday for Tiller. Most anti-abortion groups avoided the service, having denounced Tiller's shooting.

Roeder, a 51-year-old abortion opponent, was arrested a few hours after the shooting just outside Kansas City.

Alaskans' worry about missile strike persists

By MARY PEMBERTON
The Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Alaskans are concerned over the prospect that North Korea is getting ready to test a long-range missile that could reach strategic targets in their home state.

And they are not buying Defense Secretary Robert Gates' assertion during a visit this past week to one of Alaska's many military installations that the missile is not a threat to the U.S.

"I think we would definitely be a target because of the oil and the military," said Dale Walberg, owner of a small greenhouse business in Eagle River. "They are just so secretive. What do we really know?"

There has been no direct threat against Alaska or anywhere else, but the missile North Korea is believed to be assembling for a test may have a range of 4,000 miles, putting Hawaii and much of Alaska within reach.

Alaska's two largest cities, Anchorage and Fairbanks, have both Air Force and Army bases. There's also Fort Greely, home of the Missile Defense Complex. The U.S. plans to store 26 ground-based missile interceptors in silos at the base.

Other high-profile targets would include Prudhoe Bay, the largest U.S. oil field, or Valdez, the terminus of the 800-mile trans-Alaska pipeline.

Bert Cottle, mayor of Valdez, where 16 percent of the nation's domestic oil production is loaded onto tankers for delivery to the West Coast, said he checked with two military leaders in Alaska to get their take on the developing missile situation and was told everything is status quo.

Meanwhile, the state's political leaders are sending a message: Maintain a strong military presence in Alaska.

U.S. Rep. Don Young sent a letter to Gates urging him to reconsider a decision to not complete construction of a second missile defense field at Greely and to place a cap on F-22 fighters at Elmendorf Air Force Base.

"We are sending the wrong message to our enemies by stopping the placement of these interceptors," Young's letter said. "While 30 interceptors may be enough to counter the current threat from North Korea, it is clear that it will not be enough in the future."

U.S. Sen. Mark Begich said he would continue to push for the installation of the final 14 interceptors.

"It may be just one missile positioned today, but who knows what surprise North Korea will announce next?" Begich said.

Dan Goure, vice president of defense studies at the Lexington Institute in Alexandria, Va., said Alaskans should be outraged by the decision to scale back Greely's missile defense program.

"The most desirable targets these guys can hit are all in Alaska, and the system that is being deployed is inadequate," Goure said. "You may say I will trust the president to stand up to that threat, but do the people of Alaska want to be put on that front line?"

William English, 72, of Eagle River, thinks the threat is real.

"I think they are going to find a target to shoot it at, right here. You lose Prudhoe Bay and the state is gone," said English, who worked as an electrical engineer on the North Slope for 26 years.

English thinks the North Korean leader is "crazy as hell."

The town of North Pole has just 2,100 residents, but Mayor Doug Isaacson thinks it would likely be on North Korea's list of attractive targets. It's less than 10 miles from the Army's Fort Wainwright with 7,180 soldiers and from Eielson Air Force Base with 3,010 military personnel. It also has two oil refineries.

Isaacson said he has contacted public affairs officers at Fort Wainwright and local borough officials and department heads to discuss emergency plans.

"I am sure that if anybody is looking at strategic locations, North Pole is probably on the radar," he said.

Fatal crash prompts Congressional hearings about pilots' lifestyle, pay

By CAROLYN THOMPSON
The Associated Press

CLARENCE, N.Y. — Long-suffering pilots for commuter airlines say it's about time that Washington and passengers alike pay attention to the cockpit, after a federal hearing into the deadly crash of Continental Connection Flight 3407 exposed pilots who may have been exhausted, under-trained — and paid less than the bus or cab drivers who'd ferried their passengers to the airport.

"We have been calling for years trying to get the public to understand what their lifestyle is really like," said Capt. Paul Rice, first vice president of the Air Line Pilots Association, International, the nation's largest pilot's union, representing 54,000 flyers.

Like Flight 3407's co-pilot, Rebecca Shaw, Capt. Dave Ryter earned around $17,000 in his first year with a regional carrier and flew coast-to-coast just to get to work because of his placement in Miami.

Regional carriers like Ryter's, and Shaw's employer, Colgan Air, handle about half of all domestic departures and about a quarter of the passengers, about 160 million yearly.

Those providers pay considerably less than their larger counterparts, despite pilot schedules that can include multiple daily flights for six days in a row.

Rice described draining 14- to 16-hour duty days, much of that time unpaid and spent waiting in crew lounges. With no food on planes, pilots grab meals on the run from airport fast-food stands. Perks such as holiday and overtime pay don't exist, he said.

The National Transportation Safety Board's recent three-day hearing into the Feb. 12 crash near Buffalo that killed 50 people set off a cry in Congress for a review of safety at regional carriers, including training, scheduling and pay issues.

The Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee has scheduled hearings Wednesday and June 17 on pilot fatigue and safety. A House hearing is also planned for June, although no date has been set.

Pilots said fatigue and lower pay are eroding the quality of pilots entering the airline industry.

During last month's annual meeting of the Regional Airlines Association, one executive said the NTSB hearing into the Flight 3407 crash provided a skewed view of safety in an industry that, he said, treats entry-level professionals no differently than any other industry.

"We have a very robust safety management system in place," said Joseph Randell, president and chief executive of Air Canada Jazz. "In a lot of industries, entry-level conditions are onerous for junior people who come in at a lower pay. There's nothing unique about the airline business in that respect."

Russell "Chip" Childs, president and chief operating officer of Delta partner SkyWest Airlines Inc., said his company's research shows no correlation between pay and proficiency.

"People need to understand also that first-year pilot pay is a little bit lower because the companies put in $30,000 in training costs into that individual that first year. That's very well accepted," Childs said.

U.S. may put N. Korea back on terror list

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton says North Korea may be put back on the list of state sponsors of terrorism.

North Korea's recent nuclear test and a series of missile launches have drawn international criticism and concern. Some senators have asked President Barack Obama to consider putting North Korea back on the list.

North Korea was removed from the list after it said it would dismantle its nuclear weapons facilities. It has not done so.

SALT LAKE CITY — Authorities have arrested a man who allegedly told bank tellers while cleaning out his savings account in Utah that he was on a mission to kill President Barack Obama.

The Secret Service said Daniel James Murray, 36, was arrested Friday outside a casino in Laughlin, Nev.

He was charged Thursday in Salt Lake City with a federal count of conveying threats last month at Zions First National Bank in St. George, Utah.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Barbara Bearson said Murray was in federal custody in Nevada and will get a court date Monday.

In charging documents filed Thursday, the Secret Service said Daniel Murray made bizarre statements while opening — and then closing within two weeks — an $85,000 savings account.

First, he demanded to know if Zions First National Bank was solvent, saying, "I'm sure if citizens happen to lose their money, they will rise up and we could see killing and deaths," bank tellers told a Secret Service agent.

On May 27, as a teller counted out bills no larger than $50, Murray delivered a rambling discourse on the probability of economic and social disorder, ending with "We are on a mission to kill the president of the United States," a bank employee told the Secret Service.

The next day, Murray withdrew the remaining $72,000 and closed his account.

A bitter pill

Former soldier joins lawsuit against supplement maker

By MELISSA HEALY
Los Angeles Times

Early last month, Robert Tropea was at his new job at the cash register of an Army PX when his former sergeant rushed in to deliver some news: Hydroxycut, the weight-loss supplement Tropea had taken for three months in 2007, had been recalled from the market. The Food and Drug Administration had linked the product to a string of illnesses, including liver damage, seizures, abnormal heart function and a condition called rhabdomyolysis.

Tropea says he was "completely shocked": How could an herbal supplement he took to trim down do all that? At least, he thought, it offered an explanation for the mysterious turn in his health and fortune.

A former Army radio operator stationed in Stuttgart, Germany, the 27-year-old had been medically discharged from the service just six months before. After a physical-training session with his sergeant in July 2007, Tropea's arm and shoulder muscles ached as they never had before. His urine was black. At the hospital, a blood test showed his creatine kinase levels — a test for organ and muscle damage — were 3,000 times the normal limit.

Doctors diagnosed rhabdomyolysis, an acute breakdown of muscle tissue that can damage the liver and kidneys and, in severe cases, cause sudden death. Because rhabdomyolysis is most often associated with crush injuries, heat stroke, alcoholism or drug use, doctors thought it was unusual to see the condition in a fit, active-duty servicemember who, according to his military records, drank alcohol very rarely, regularly passed drug tests and had no recent history of trauma. Fearing a potentially disastrous recurrence, Tropea's physicians warned him against physical exertion of any kind.

He used to bench-press hundreds of pounds and do push-ups with one arm. Now, says Tropea, he has trouble picking up his 3-year-old cut Hardcore supplement he took. "I had read the label, looked at some of the ingredients. Quite a bit of it, I didn't know what it was. But they were selling it as something safe, and I took what they said and ran with it."

Iovate refused to discuss get down to the weight limits set for active-duty soldiers. The only medication he had ever taken was ibuprofen. Hydroxycut, he reasoned, wasn't medication.

That was where Tropea was wrong.

"Dietary supplements daughter and worries that he won't be able to coach her soccer team. His Army career — from which he had planned to retire as an officer after completing his college degree — is over.

Hydroxycut, Tropea believes, has left his health — and his future — uncertain. Tropea, who still lives in Stuttgart, is part of the first wave of plaintiffs in a planned lawsuit against Iovate Health Sciences Inc., maker of Hydroxycut.

"I thought of it as a supplement to help burn fat and increase energy — no different than a vitamin to help me with exercise," says Tropea of the Hydroxy-

Tropea's experience. "We have not seen the complaint and therefore cannot comment on it," company spokeswoman Jamie Moss said.

Like 59 percent of respondents to a Harris Poll in 2002, Tropea believed a government agency such as the FDA assured the safety of dietary supplements before they could be sold to the public. It is a belief that is only partially true.

Tropea had not even thought to inform his doctors at the time of his hospitalization that he had been taking Hydroxycut steadily for three months in an effort to boost his fitness level and are typically derived from plants and minerals, and they certainly can have effects on the body" as powerful as the effects that drugs can have, says David B. Allison, director of the University of Alabama at Birmingham's Clinical Nutrition Research Center and an expert on the safety of dietary supplements.

"This idea that dietary supplements are all natural is nice," he said. "But they're really no different than many drugs which are traditionally derived from minerals or extracts of plants or animals. And everything we do and take has side effects."

Kids who move often at higher risk for suicide

By MELISSA HEALY
Los Angeles Times

The more often a family moves, the higher the likelihood that a child dragged along to a new home will attempt or commit suicide, a new study of Danish children suggests.

Combing through a Danish national database of children who have attempted or committed suicide, researchers at University of Aarhus in Denmark found that a majority — 55 percent — of these children had changed residences more than three times in their childhoods. Among the comparison group of children who never had attempted or committed suicide, fewer than 1 in 3 (32 percent) had made more than three household moves.

Each year, 1 in 5 U.S. families moves, making Americans among the most transient people in the industrialized world. For some children, especially those whose parents work corporate jobs or are in the military, a childhood spent moving every two to three years is not unusual. In 2004, the last year for which child suicides were counted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 4,599 youths between ages 10 and 24 committed suicide.

The study underscores "the importance of stability on a child's psychosocial well-being," according to the authors, led by Dr. Ping Qin. Children who move frequently suffer a break in their relationships with friends and classmates, disruptions in their participation in organized activities, distress and worries, the authors wrote in the latest issue of the Archives of General Psychiatry. Because the parents often are preoccupied by a new home, new job and new environment, these children often might find they have nowhere to turn with their troubles.

"A suicide attempt may, to some extent, express the need for more attention from their parents," the authors noted, adding that schools as well as parents and caregivers should pay more attention to the distress of kids with a history of being uprooted frequently.

The authors stressed that they could not tell whether frequent moves were the immediate cause of the suicidal gestures. It could be, for instance, that parents with mental health issues are more likely to move frequently, and that their children are more vulnerable to mental illness themselves because of genetic inheritance and upbringing. But even after researchers took account of parents' mental health in their calculations, children who moved more often were more likely to try to kill themselves.

FACES

Octomom: I screwed up my life

Octuplets mother Nadya Suleman says she didn't tell her sperm donor she was having more children after the first six, and fears his resentment for the betrayal.

In a video shot in a fondue restaurant and posted to the RadarOnline Web site Thursday, Suleman says she used frozen fertilized embryos left over from her first conceptions to become pregnant with eight additional children. The donor didn't know she had the leftover embryos, she said.

"I went behind his back and used them all," she says. "He didn't want me to. I feel so much guilt for that."

The videographer, identified by Radar as Suleman's best friend, says at one point that the

"I screwed up myself. I screwed up my kids' lives. I have to put on this strong facade and I have to pretend like I don't regret it."

sperm donor has a wife and family.

But Suleman warns her away from giving away too much about the man, adding that "he'd lose everything he's created in his own life" if his identity was revealed.

Suleman says her older children are increasingly curious about who their biological father is. She refuses to identify him, saying she wants to protect his privacy, but also wants him "to somehow, privately, secretly know [the children] in a controlled manner."

Dipping cheesecake into melted chocolate, Suleman confesses in the video to making some mistakes.

"I screwed myself. I screwed up my life, I screwed up my kids' lives," she says. "I have to put on this strong facade and I have to pretend like I don't regret it."

Suleman gave birth to the world's longest-surviving set of octuplets on Jan. 26.

MARRY ME!

People.com says that in a new chat with Las Vegas columnist Robin Leach, actress Vanessa Minnillo, who is dating Nick Lachey, mentioned marriage no less than "three times."

When Leach pointed to a five-carat ring on her middle finger, Minnillo, who was with her man at the Maxim Hot 100 party last month, quickly retorted with, "it will be 10 carats when it moves to the fourth finger!"

BETHESDA SOFTWARES/AP

Actress Eliza Dushku signed autographs at the Bethesda Softworks booth at the E3 Expo in Los Angeles last week. Dushku voices the lead character, Rubi Malone, in the Bethesda Softworks video game "WET." She recently traveled to Uganda to spend time with former child soldiers.

Actress Dushku meets with ex-Uganda child soldiers

TV actors are known for traveling in the break between seasons. But "Dollhouse" star Eliza Dushku did more than just go on vacation.

The 28-year-old Dushku visited Uganda recently to meet with former child soldiers who are trying to reintegrate themselves back into society. The actress' mother, Judith, is an African political science professor who arranged the trip for her students with Global Exchange, an organization based in San Francisco.

Dushku says her experience in Uganda made her look at the world differently, and she suggests that others spend time learning about people in need.

"Dollhouse" will return for its second season on Fox in the fall.

AWKWARD

"Transformers" sexpot Megan Fox hates having sex on camera because it makes her feel like a prostitute. Fox admits shooting intimate scenes with co-stars is awkward because they have to fake it. Since actors get paid to "feign attraction and love," she likens the Hollywood profession to hooking.

Paris off to Dubai to find BFF

Paris Hilton is flying to Dubai to shoot an episode of her own MTV show, "My New BFF."

Producer Michael Hirschorn says Hilton wants to expand her show into a global franchise. Hirschorn says the show, which will respect all regional laws and customs, will be "broadcast throughout the Arab region."

LaBeouf to star in follow-up

Shia LaBeouf is heading to Wall Street. The actor confirms he will appear in "Money Never Sleeps," director Oliver Stone's follow-up to "Wall Street." LaBeouf will star opposite Michael Douglas, who won an Oscar for his role in the original 1987 film.

The "Transformers" star describes the film as "a walk and talk money movie" that's "wordy and heady."

Filming begins in August, an experience LaBeouf says should be like a college course — he says he has "no concept" of the ins and outs of the financial world.

Mom: My sons could be seduced

"They are men. They have desires. They have testosterone."

So says Denise Jonas about her three boys, the Jonas Brothers. Denise Jonas tells Good Housekeeping that she's 100 percent behind her boys, even if their desires get them in trouble. "If they make a mistake, I'm not going to hate them," she says. "I don't think they are above or below being seduced. I would be foolish if I thought that. They are tested and tested, like every one of us. I pray for them."

Denise Jonas says her boys — Kevin, 21, Joe, 19, and Nick, 16 — have been criticized because they made the decision to wear purity rings. "They've been criticized for proclaiming things they never proclaimed," she says. "And what's the criticism? They don't want to go out there giving everyone an STD? What's so terrible about that?"

IT'S A BOY!

This photo posted on cyclist Lance Armstrong's Twitter page shows his newborn son, Max. Armstrong, who won the Tour de France seven straight years after overcoming testicular cancer, posted this photo in a tweet about 11:15 p.m. on June 4 welcoming Max Armstrong to the world and announcing the baby weighed 7 pounds, 5 ounces and was 20 inches long. Both mother, girlfriend Anna Hansen, and baby are doing fine. Armstrong has three children with his ex-wife, Kristin.

MUSICAL?

"Twilight" should've been a musical. According to Peter Facinelli — who plays Carlisle Cullen in the vampire franchise — the cast of "Twilight" likes to jam behind the scenes. Heartthrob Robert Pattinson, right, plays guitar and sings for his co-stars, while Kristen Stewart, left, both at the MTV Movie Awards last week, sometimes accompanies him on her own guitar. Facinelli says Pattinson has "an insanely good voice."

Amish head West for cheaper land, serenity

WESTCLIFFE, Colo. — A new road sign cautions drivers to watch for Amish horse-drawn carriages in the valley beneath Colorado's Sangre de Cristo mountains. Highway pull-offs and dedicated horse-and-buggy paths are in the works.

Amid the serenity and isolation of southern Colorado, hamlets such as Westcliffe, La Jara and Monte Vista are welcoming Amish families who are moving West to escape high land prices and community overcrowding back East in Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

"The reason we moved out West is the farm land is a little bit cheaper and it's not as heavily populated, a little more open space and a little more opportunity for young people to get started with their own farms," said Ben Coblentz, a 47-year-old alfalfa farmer from Indiana. "The general public seems to have a little slower pace of life than what it was back east. Everybody here respects us."

Of nearly 231,000 Amish nationwide, more than 60 percent live in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana.

But from 2002 to 2008, Colorado's Amish population went from zero to more than 400, according to the Young Center for Anabaptist and Pietist Studies at Pennsylvania's Elizabethtown College. Montana, with an estimated 540 Amish, and Colorado now have the westernmost Amish settlements in the U.S. Colorado ranks seventh in the nation in Amish immigration, according to the Young Center.

Coblentz moved to Monte Vista four years ago with his wife, Laura, and their four children. They were the 12th Amish family to settle in the area.

"There are 28 families now," Coblentz said. "Two more families are moving in next week."

Others will likely follow.

"I see it happening where there will be a lot more Amish making a westward movement, just because of the land prices," said Stephen Scott, a research associate at the Young Center.

Cropland is worth an average $1,400 per acre in Colorado, compared with $6,000 in Pennsylvania and about $4,000 in Ohio and Indiana, according to a 2007 Census by the Department of Agriculture. Cropland values in Pennsylvania jumped 17 percent from 2006 to 2007 but by 6 percent in Colorado.

The Amish are a Christian denomination who trace their roots to the Protestant Reformation in 16th-century Europe and migrated to North America in the 18th and 19th centuries.

'Resident,' 'domicile' different

In reading articles about the contractors who have lost their status-of-forces-agreement status as a result of Contracting Command Korea's updated interpretation of the requirement for a SOFA-protected contractor to be "ordinarily a resident" of the United States, it occurs to me that the problem lies in a misunderstanding of the term "resident" on the part of CCK officials, who are confusing it with the term "domicile."

One is legally a resident of the country whose passport he or she holds, unless that person has legally established residency in another country by applying for "resident alien status," meaning he or she holds a "green card," or similar document, and intends to make the new country the permanent home (i.e. live, die and be buried in the new country). One is domiciled wherever he or she usually sleeps at night, regardless of residency. A person who is "ordinarily a resident" of the United States may be domiciled in any country in the world, even for extended periods of time, without affecting residency or citizenship.

Perhaps the people making this decision

don't realize that the principle of legal residency within the U.S., where for most civilians residency changes when one moves from one state to another, does not hold true on the international level, where legal applications and documents must be filed in order for one to change his or her legal country of residency.

New weather map is an affront

I have noticed that you have stopped the practice of printing an informative weather map in the Stars and Stripes. I like looking at the forecasts for the upcoming days, and I also like to see where the fronts are to better understand the weather.

The weather map that you currently print is as useful as mammary glands on a male pig. If you are really so pressed for space in the paper, just don't print Ann Coulter's column.

Is arrogance a renewable resource?

BY GEORGE WILL

There once was an Indianapolis concert featuring 50 pianos. Splendid instruments, pianos. Still, 50 might have been excessive. As is today's chorus summoning us to save the planet.

In the history of developed democracies with literate publics served by mass media, there is no precedent for today's media enlistment in the crusade to promote global warming "awareness." Concerning this, journalism, which fancies itself skeptical and nonconforming, is neither.

The incessant hectoring by the media-political complex's "consciousness-raising" campaign has provoked a comic riposte in the form of "The Goode Family," an animated ABC entertainment program [in prime time]. Cartoons seem, alas, to be the most effective means of seizing a mass audience's attention. Still, the program is welcome evidence of the bursting of what has been called "the green bubble."

Gerald and Helen Goode, their children and dog Che (when supervised, he is a vegan; when unsupervised, squirrels disappear) live in a college town, where T-shirts and other media instruct ("Meat is murder"), admonish ("Don't kill wood") and exhort ("Support our troops ... and their opponents"). The college, where Gerald works, gives students tenure. And when Gerald says his department needs money to raise the percentage of minority employees, his boss cheerily replies, "Or we could just fire three white guys. Everybody wins!" Helen shops at the One Earth store, where community shaming enforces social responsibility: "Attention One Earth shoppers, the driver of the SUV is in aisle four. He's wearing the baseball cap."

The New York Times television critic

disapproves. The show "feels aggressively off-kilter with the current mood, as if it had been incubated in the early to mid-'90s, when it was possible to find global-warming skeptics among even the reasonable and informed." That is a perfect (because completely complacent) sample of the grating smugness of the planet-savers, delivered by an entertainment writer: Reasonable dissent is impossible. Cue the pianos.

"The Goode Family" does not threaten Jonathan Swift's standing as the premier English-language satirist. But when a Goode child apologizes to his parent for driving too much, and the parent responds, "It's OK. ... What's important is that you feel guilty about it," the program touches upon an important phenomenon: ecology as psychology. In "The Green Bubble: Why Environmentalism Keeps Imploding" [the New Republic, May 20], Ted Nordhaus and Michael Shellenberger, authors of "Break Through: Why We Can't Leave Saving the Planet to Environmentalists," say that a few years ago, being green "moved beyond politics." Gestures — bringing reusable grocery bags to the store, purchasing a $4 heirloom tomato, inflating tires, weatherizing windows — "gained fresh urgency" and "were suddenly infused with grand significance."

Green consumption became "positional consumption" that identified the consumer as a member of a moral and intellectual elite. A 2007 survey found that 57 percent of Prius purchasers said they bought their car because "it makes a statement about me." Honda, alert to the bull market in status effects, reshaped its 2009 Insight hybrid to look like a Prius.

Nordhaus and Shellenberger note the telling "insignificance," as environmental measures, of planting gardens or using fluorescent bulbs. Their significance is therapeutic, but not for the planet. They make people feel better:

"After all, we can't escape the fact that we depend on an infrastructure — roads, buildings, sewage systems, power plants, electrical grids, etc. — that requires huge quantities of fossil fuels. But the ecological irrelevance of these practices was beside the point."

The point of "utopian environmentalism" was to reduce guilt. During the green bubble, many Americans became "captivated by the twin thoughts that human civilization could soon come crashing down — and that we are on the cusp of a sudden leap forward in consciousness, one that will allow us to heal ourselves, our society, and our planet. Apocalyptic fears meld seamlessly into utopian hopes." Suddenly, commonplace acts — e.g., buying light bulbs — infused pedestrian lives with cosmic importance. But:

"Greens often note that the changing global climate will have the greatest impact on the world's poor; they neglect to mention that the poor also have the most to gain from development fueled by cheap fossil fuels like coal. For the poor, the climate is already dangerous."

Now, say Nordhaus and Shellenberger, "the green bubble" has burst, pricked by Americans' intensified reluctance to pursue greenness at a cost to economic growth. The dark side of utopianism is "escapism and a disengagement from reality that marks all bubbles, green or financial." Re-engagement with reality is among the recession's benefits.

America's legacy is fading in the Pacific

By CRAIG HOOPER

Every time the Atlantic partnership needs reinvigoration, U.S. presidents turn to our nation's silent stone diplomats — the 36 American military memorials throughout Europe.

On Saturday, the 65th anniversary of D-Day, President Barack Obama addressed the European alliance before the same Normandy monuments President Ronald Reagan used as a backdrop for his Cold War "Boys of Pointe du Hoc" speech in 1984, a sweeping challenge to the Soviet Union.

But this "good war" magic remains a solidly European phenomenon — whether it be D-Day or most any other wartime commemoration. Far from the old Cold War frontiers, our nation's South Pacific battlefields sit on the sidelines of great-power geopolitics.

Failure to tend the Pacific World War II legacy — which would be a strong foundation for future engagement — is a strategic mistake. As the Pacific Basin evolves from a safe American "lake" into a dangerous geopolitical playing field, appreciation of our World War II sacrifices there might, in the future, tip the scales in favor of peace over conflict.

Little time is left to evoke the "good war" legacy. The United States' benign postwar presence, an experience once common to virtually every Pacific Islander, is now mostly a sepia-tinted myth preached by old-timers. The fight that helped generate new nations goes uncelebrated by the primary beneficiaries, an assemblage of 14 fledgling island democracies.

It wasn't always this way. For decades after World War II, Pacific theater veterans could be counted on to sustain their own heritage. Survivors of the landing on Tarawa, one of the toughest U.S. fights in World War II, saved their battle memorial site in 1988, when the young democratic Republic of Kiribati decided to build a cold-storage plant on it for a Japanese fishing fleet. But now the battlefield at Red Beach, where many people died, is being consumed by garbage.

Few veterans are left to fight for their history. The duty of defending Tarawa's fading U.S. legacy has fallen to Leon Cooper, an 89-year-old veteran and the subject of a documentary this year chronicling his campaign.

Elsewhere in the Pacific, memories of key American battlefield contributions are disappearing. In the Solomon Islands, Guadalcanal's Henderson Field, the site of the first U.S. strategic offensive of the war and named after a Marine aviator killed in the Battle of Midway, began a re-branding process in 2003. It became the more "neutral" Honiara International Airport, named for the capital.

Crosses identify the final resting place of U.S. Marines killed in the Battle of Tarawa in this November 1943 photo.

All memory of America's massive wartime development project — the establishment of a Pacific-wide logistical support network — has almost vanished.

Even living monuments — the islanders who once served the United States — have been neglected. Solomon Islander Eroni "Aaron" Kumana, a native coast-watcher working behind Japanese lines, helped save John F. Kennedy, our future president, whose PT boat was sunk in 1943. And although Kennedy invited Kumana to his inauguration (he was not able to attend), the hero had to wait 64 years before federal officials bothered to express gratitude. By the time U.S. Navy Secretary Donald Winter handed the old U.S. scout a flag and some trinkets in 2007, Kumana was deaf and impoverished, and his small house had been destroyed by an earthquake. With no U.S. government money available to help, the crew aboard the U.S. assault ship Peleliu resorted to passing the hat.

This is no way to tend a legacy.

In today's highly wired Internet society, where history is just a few keyboard clicks away, it is easy to forget that physical memorials, real war graves and crumbling fortifications are useful. In the Pacific, old-fashioned polished stone memorials are one of the few ways average Pacific Islanders can connect to the United States.

And at this point, America has little else to offer.

In the Solomon Islands, despite the fact that less than 2 percent of the population has online access, the local U.S. diplomatic presence has dwindled to a "virtual" Internet embassy. In these unconnected regions, a few granite diplomats may yet prove a better long-term investment than an unusable high-tech showpiece.

With the United States' Pacific influence on the wane, the clock is ticking. Over the next five years, as the U.S. struggles to fund a dwindling and overtaken Navy, Russia, China, Japan, South Korea and other Asian countries are preparing to invest more than $60 billion in a regionwide naval arms race. When those new navies, all accompanied by a corps of highly trained, well-funded and active flesh-and-bone diplomats, start moving into the Pacific Basin to work to resolve festering environmental, ethnic and political problems, it will be far too late for the U.S. to start invoking past sacrifices.

Much outrage over Dr. Tiller. What about Pvt. Long?

By JACK KELLY

Two Americans were murdered last week by possibly deranged religious and political extremists with criminal records, prosecutors say.

Dr. George Tiller, 67, who performed late-term abortions, was shot while attending services at the Reformation Lutheran Church in Wichita, Kan. on May 31, allegedly by Scott Roeder, 51.

The FBI has identified Roeder as a member of the Freemen, a right-wing anti-government group. In 1996, Scott Roeder was charged with criminal use of explosives. Roeder's brother, David, said he suffered from mental illness at times.

The next morning, prosecutors say Carlos Bledsoe, 24, a black Muslim convert who now calls himself Abdul Hakim Mujahid Muhammad, opened fire on two soldiers with an AK-47 assault rifle while driving past an Army recruiting station in Little Rock, Ark. in his black SUV. Pvt. William Long, 23, was killed. Pvt. Quinton Ezeagwu, 18, was wounded.

Bledsoe converted to Islam in 2004, according to Jihad Watch. He went to Yemen to study with a radical imam. He was arrested and jailed there for traveling on a Somali passport. He "wanted to kill as many people in the Army as he could," an investigator told journalists.

Within hours, President Barack Obama told the national news media he was "shocked and outraged" by the murder of Dr. Tiller. After two days of silence, he told The Associated Press in Arkansas he was "deeply saddened" by the murder of Pvt. Long.

The assassination of Dr. Tiller triggered massive commentary in the news media, particularly on cable television, much of it speculation about how criticism of Tiller by pro-life groups may have affected the shooter. But the murder of Pvt. Long drew little attention.

"Why the hesitancy to talk about the motivations of the man who allegedly killed Pvt. William Long?" asked Jeffrey Goldberg of the Atlantic.

The answer to Goldberg's question appears to be that Dr. Tiller's murder facilitated guilt-by-association charges against people liberals want to demonize, while Pvt. Long's murder raises concerns about people they want to protect.

Dr. Tiller was one of only three physicians in the country who performed abortions after 21 weeks, when fetuses are considered viable. This incurred the wrath of pro-life groups, who called him "Tiller the killer," a moniker not inappropriate for someone who performed 60,000 abortions.

All who criticized Dr. Tiller were accomplices in his death, many in the media said. Pro-life groups were motivated by "the kind of hate that would prompt some maniac to take a gun into a church and shoot a man to death in front of his friends and family," said Mike Hendricks of The Kansas City (Mo.) Star.

I don't recall anyone in journalism declaring that opponents of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan are accomplices in the murder of Pvt. Long.

Every pro-life group issued a statement condemning Dr. Tiller's murder within hours of his death. The Muslim Public Affairs Council issued a statement condemning the murder of Pvt. Long. The larger Council on American-Islamic Relations has so far said nothing.

There is no evidence Dr. Tiller's killer had accomplices. "An armed-to-the-teeth Muslim convert on a killing mission at an Arkansas recruiting station had a computer photo of a similar facility in Times Square," the New York Post reported Wednesday. "Investigators are trying to figure out if anyone else had known about Muhammad's plans."

Many journalists try to conflate the Christian right with Muslim extremists, noted James Kirchick of the New Republic, a liberal opinion journal. "But the Christian right's responsible reaction to the death of George Tiller should put to rest the lie that Judeo-Christian extremists are anywhere near as numerous or dangerous as those of the Muslim variety," he said.

Police shoot man inside station

NY NEW YORK — A man wielding a knife with an 8-inch blade stabbed a bystander outside a New York City police station and ran inside, where he was shot and wounded by officers, authorities said.

The 48-year-old stabbing victim and the suspect, 35-year-old Armondo Torres, of Queens, were both hospitalized in stable condition.

The victim, was standing on the steps outside the busy 109th Precinct station house in downtown Flushing, Queens, when, unprovoked, he was stabbed in the back, said police department spokesman Paul Browne.

Torres was charged with assault and criminal possession of a weapon.

Robbery suspect pulls a Houdini but lands in jail

AR FORREST CITY — An armed Arkansas robbery suspect had a trick or two up his sleeve but police weren't about to be played for fools.

Lawrence Harden Jr., 29, was arrested, accused of robbing a liquor store.

Police supervisor Bobby Carter in Forrest City says on the way to jail, the handcuffed, shackled Harden managed to open a window, get out of the SUV and run away — still in his leg irons. It took tracking dogs an hour and a half to find him.

After officers put him in a car, Carter says, Harden managed to get out of that vehicle, too. He was found behind a nearby house.

Harden is now in jail, charged among other things, with aggravated robbery.

Lawn mower beer run leads to OUI charge

ME VASSALBORO — A Maine man stands accused of getting behind the wheel after drinking. But he wasn't operating a car or truck — he was on a lawn mower.

Police say 51-year-old Danforth Ross, of Vassalboro, was charged with operating under the influence after he and a friend made a beer run on a riding lawn mower. The arrest came after the two emerged from a variety store with two cases of beer.

Ross' driver's license had been revoked, so he and a passenger opted for the lawn mower.

Trooper Joe Chretien made the arrest after getting flagged down by several motorists warning of a wayward mower.

Climbers' remains found on Mount McKinley

AK ANCHORAGE — Searchers have found the bodies of two Japanese climbers who disappeared last year on Alaska's Mount McKinley.

The frozen bodies of the 27-year-old and 24-year-old men were found connected by a rope. They had been missing since May 22, 2008.

The bodies were discovered about 500 feet from the top of the 20,320-foot mountain. Mount McKinley is North America's tallest peak.

The discovery was made thanks to high-resolution images captured during a recent search for another missing climber.

Commission to tell cops of DNA near matches

NY ALBANY — A change in state rules on DNA labs will allow forensic scientists to tell police when crime scene DNA is a near match to a convicted criminal in their database, indicating the perpetrator was probably a relative.

Regulations to implement it could take months. New York's databank contains DNA profiles from nearly 341,000 offenders.

Denise O'Donnell, commissioner of the Division of Criminal Justice Services, says such partial matches have come up "infrequently."

The New York Civil Liberties Union, citing potential for errors, says it threatens privacy and due process rights.

High school's graduation canceled over cheating

OH CENTERBURG — An Ohio school district says it has canceled a high school's graduation ceremony after discovering several seniors cheated on a test.

Centerburg schools, northeast of Columbus, announced the cancellation of graduation ceremonies following an emergency meeting of the education board.

The district says a Centerburg High School senior apparently hacked into the school's computer system, found the test and made copies of it.

The district says it decided to cancel graduation because so many seniors were involved either by cheating or by knowing about the cheating but failing to report it.

FBI: Employee helped friend get gun on plane

PA PHILADELPHIA — The FBI charged a US Airways employee with helping his roommate get a concealed, semi-automatic handgun onto a plane departing Philadelphia.

Customer service agent Roshid Milledge switched black carry-on bags with passenger Damien Young at the gate so Young could board the flight to Phoenix with the unloaded 9 mm weapon, the FBI said in an affidavit.

Young, 29, was moving to Phoenix and had asked Milledge about the procedures for transporting guns. Milledge, 38, instead agreed to carry the bag through an employee entrance so it would not be screened by security.

An alert fellow passenger saw the switch and, sensing that Milledge seemed "fidgety," raised concerns. Young, already on the plane, allegedly denied to a US Airways manager that he had switched bags with anyone. The plane then started to taxi, but was soon called back to the gate so Young could be removed.

He then admitted the bag was his and both men gave statements, the FBI said.

Scientists finding more dinosaur bones at quarry

UT SALT LAKE CITY — Scientists at one of Utah's major new dinosaur quarries have reported finding 60 to 70 new bones this spring, including what appears to be a 20-foot-long neck bone.

The latest finds are fresh evidence that the site near Hanksville could be a large and important source of bones in the coming years.

"In some places you can't work to remove one bone without finding four or five more," said Scott Williams, collections and exhibits manager at the Burpee Museum of Natural History, the Rockford, Ill.-based institution that's been digging at the site.

Cuban-born Watergate burglar dies in Fla. at 92

FL MIAMI — Bernard Leon Barker, a Cuban-born CIA operative who participated in the Bay of Pigs invasion and was later a Watergate burglar, has died in Florida. He was 92.

Barker's stepdaughter, Kelly Andrad, says that he died at his suburban Miami home after being taken to the Veteran's Administration Medical Center the night before.

He had suffered from cancer and heart problems but his exact cause of death was unclear.

Kids locked in vehicle while mom shops

NY HOLBROOK — A Long Island woman faces charges that she left her 2-year-old twins alone in a car for 45 minutes while shopping. One of the toddlers has Down syndrome.

Suffolk County police say the children were in car seats, with the car doors locked and the engine running, when they were found outside a Costco in Holbrook.

An officer broke a car window to get them out.

The mother is charged with child endangerment.

Families sue city over 2007 fireworks injuries

VA VIENNA — Two families are suing the town of Vienna over a 2007 Fourth of July fireworks show at which a group of spectators were seriously injured.

According to the lawsuits, Michael Ku and his son suffered severe burns, perforated eardrums and puncture wounds, while Kathryn Hollis and her two sons suffered disfiguring burns and traumatic brain injuries.

Fairfax County fire marshals are also named in the suits, along with the show operator and the company alleged to have imported the fireworks.

The fire marshals had warned Vienna officials for several years that the annual fireworks display in the center of town was a bad idea, but the displays continued.

The town says it has no liability for the incident, and the fire department declined to comment on the suit.

Thief has great gall: Humpty Dumpty gone

NH PETERBOROUGH — Missing: One Humpty Dumpty costume, last seen with Cheshire Cat.

The costume belongs to the Peterborough Players, a southern New Hampshire theater troupe. It was made for a production of "Alice's Adventure in Wonderland."

The New Hampshire Union Leader reports that the costume was last seen at a May 16 festival.

During the festival, the theater company breaks out many costumes and allows children to try them on. The costumes are then worn by actors in a parade.

But it appears someone got their hands on Humpty and walked away. Someone spotted the costumed thief walking with a person in a Cheshire Cat costume.

A teenager has since returned the cat costume, but all the king's horses and all the king's men cannot find Humpty Dumpty again.

Man pleads guilty to disabled sister's death

KY GEORGETOWN — A Kentucky man has pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the death of his disabled sister, whose mummified remains were found in the trunk of his car last year.

Scott County Circuit clerk Karen Boehm said Timothy Brown, 30, of Georgetown also pleaded guilty to knowing abuse and neglect of an adult, theft by deception, tampering with physical evidence and abuse of a corpse.

A call to Brown's attorney, Joe Fooks, was not immediately returned.

Police found the remains of Penny Brown, 31, wrapped up in quilts and blankets in the car last September. Her body was so decomposed the state medical examiner's office couldn't determine a cause of death.

Police say Penny Brown's body may have been in her brother's apartment for up to two years.

Man tries drug buy with slaughtered pig

NY SYRACUSE — It was a different sort of drug trade.

Syracuse police say a 45-year-old man offered a slaughtered pig as partial payment for a bag of crack cocaine.

They say two men were spotted doing the deal on a street corner in the early evening.

Angelo Colon of Fulton was arrested on a misdemeanor drug possession charge and 42-year-old Omar Veliz faces a felony drug sale charge.

Police say Colon paid half a pig and $10 for a $50 bag of crack. Veliz told police the pig was for a celebration for a relative being released from jail.

While officers were arresting the suspects, someone took the pig.

Police don't know if the men have lawyers.

DA drops charge in 1995 murder case

WI MILWAUKEE — A homicide charge was dropped against a man who spent 13 years in prison in the killing of a teenage runaway whose death might be among several other Milwaukee slayings linked by DNA, authorities said.

Milwaukee County Assistant District Attorney Mark Williams didn't rule out refiling the charge against Chaunte Ott. He also wouldn't rule out that the slaying of 16-year-old Jessica Payne in 1995 could be connected to the killings of six other women from 1986 to 2007.

Police said last month that the DNA of an unknown suspect was found on the other victims and Payne, whose throat was slashed. However, they also said someone else likely killed Payne.

"I don't know, we are going to have to find out," Williams said. "We're investigating to see who killed her."

5-year-old sent to traffic class

NM LOS LUNAS — A New Mexico 5-year-old sentenced to traffic safety class after refusing to wear a seat belt has reformed.

David Kirk-Peet completed the class with a certificate. He promised to buckle up, saying: "You want to get safe." Magistrate Buddy Sanchez sentenced David and his mother to the class after an officer spotted the boy unbuckling his seat belt earlier this year. His mother received a ticket for failing to restrain him. She asked the officer to speak to David about the importance of seat belts because he constantly unbuckled.

Horoscope

Do you feel yourself getting serious about something that is certain to affect your life on a large scale? With the current dynamic between Venus and Pluto, you may feel ready to take on the larger decisions such as whom you'll marry, what kind of work you'll do or where you'll live. The Capricorn moon weighs in with some practical inspiration.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (JUNE 9). You give generously of your talents this year and sharpen them in the process. The work you do increases in value — new customers pay a fair price. Your love life sparkles this month. The commitment you make continues to brighten your way and lighten your heart. Invest in your business and education in August. Scorpio and Capricorn adore you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You are so accustomed to certain liberties that you do not even know you are free. Increase your awareness of the many ways in which you unbound, uncontrolled and unregulated. Celebrate the many possibilities open to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You may be going through a slight burnout at work, questioning your career choices and perhaps your line of work altogether. Blow off some of the grunt work to focus on the thing about your job you love.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're in the thick of an important decision. Make a list of pros and cons — not because one side will outweigh the other, but because it's eye-opening and will get you centered on what matters to you. Take your time on this.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll get an insight into the part of a relationship that is not working for you. It's great news because this is probably a minor issue that can be easily handled with few choice words and the right attitude.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Too much of the same thing is mind num-ing. Doing different kinds of work will keep you engaged in life. When you get discouraged with one task or person, move around to reinvigorate yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The project you're into now is not the kind of thing that provides an immediate payoff. Your dreams and visions of the glory days ahead of you will be a reward in the short term, so take pleasure in these fantasies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). When faced with the choice of being a skeptic or a believer, you are wise to choose the latter. At least right now, there is no harm in it. Consider this: The placebo, if it works, is real medicine.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). An interesting challenge might be called an "issue" or a "problem" — but not by you. You're more likely to name this complicated little puzzle something grand like, "my greatest adventure to date."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Gently address those who hold a viewpoint that opposes your own. Your earnest, well-phrased argument might have an impact. If you can sway even one person, you've done something remarkable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There is something you know you can accomplish, even though there is not a shred of evidence to support you. Never surrender to doubt. Only you know what is true about yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Use your "no, thank you's" often today. If you are offered sweets, and you're not in the mood, don't take the sweets just because you don't want to offend the giver. Furthermore, walk away from all unwanted influences.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Someone who comes across as supportive and involved may also be more controlling than you'd like. Lay boundaries. Be secure in your own power and do not lean emotionally on this person now.

'Other Woman' regrets choice

Dear Abby: I'm responding to "The Other Woman, Anywhere, USA" (March 11). Please tell your readers if they find themselves in her shoes, they should RUN in the opposite direction.

My husband, "John," and I both left our spouses to be together. It has been 10 years, and I regret leaving my ex-husband every day. I traded a wonderful marriage for an obnoxious, self-absorbed, arrogant man.

John still spends Christmas Day with his ex and his adult children. He says it's out of guilt. He paid for his daughter's wedding reception with money from our joint account. John went alone. I was "forbidden" to attend.

My "soul mate" usually forgets my birthday, and one year he also "forgot" Christmas. If only I could turn back time. I find myself praying for the end of time and realize I'm probably getting what I deserve.

— Living With Regret

Dear Living: Your letter is a reminder that there is dignity in being alone and filling one's "down time" with good friends and helping the less fortunate. As I expected, "Other Woman's" letter generated a ton of mail. Read on:

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: Your reply to "The Other Woman" was 100 percent right on. I was once in love with a married woman and won her heart. I thought, "All's fair in love and war," and had little regard for her husband. Then I met him.

When I looked into his eyes, I knew what I was doing was wrong and bad karma. Here was a human being with a soul, who loved and trusted his wife, who was true to his marriage vows and trusted her to be true, too. If the situation were reversed, I wouldn't want my wife to have an affair with another man. Spiritually, it was an important and painful lesson.

My advice to married people having an affair is to ask yourselves how you would feel if you were being cheated on. Do the right thing. Honesty and integrity matter.

— Former Other Man, Anywhere, USA

Dear Abby: I was the other woman for six years. It has taken me a year to realize how unhealthy the relationship was for me. Not only did it damage my self-esteem, but the guilt became unbearable. I wish I could go back and undo what I have done. Luckily, I now have someone who cares about me and accepts me — flaws and all — and loves me for who I am all the time, not just one or two hours a week.

— Wiser Now In Virginia

Readers: More tomorrow!

Letters for this column — with your name and phone number — should be addressed to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles CA 90069. Readers can write to Abby on the Internet at <http://www.ueexpress.com/dearabby>

MLS roundup

Chivas tops Seattle to boost lead

The Associated Press

CARSON, Calif. — Eduardo Lillingston's goal in the 38th minute was enough for Chivas USA to beat Seattle FC 1-0 on Saturday and extend its lead in Major League Soccer.

Chivas ended a run of three games without a victory and went six points above Houston atop the Western Conference. Seattle has gone six games without a victory after a promising start to its inaugural MLS season.

Lillingston scored with a tap-in after teammate Paulo Nagamura had a close-range shot blocked by Seattle keeper Kasey Keller.

Crew 2, Wizards 0: At Kansas City, Kan., Guillermo Barros Schelotto capitalized on an early defensive mistake for a goal, then tacked on a second-half penalty goal as Columbus broke an eight-match winless streak on the road.

The Argentine playmaker's eight goals this season tie him for the league scoring lead with Colorado's Conor Casey, who played for the U.S. national team Saturday.

Galaxy 2, Toronto FC 1: At Toronto, substitute Edson Buddle scored the winning goal late in the second half as Los Angeles extended its unbeaten streak to 10 games.

It also was the first victory for the Galaxy after five consecutive draws.

Alan Gordon had given Los Angeles a lead in the sixth minute, heading in Eddie Lewis' corner. English striker Danny Dichio equalized for Toronto.

Rapids 1, Real Salt Lake 1: At Sandy, Utah, Omar Cummings drilled a shot past goalkeeper Nick Rimando in the 88th minute to salvage a home point for Colorado.

Colorado took advantage after Real Salt Lake's Robbie Russell picked up his second yellow card in the 82nd minute and was ejected. Yura Movsisyan scored in the 79th minute for RSL.

Fullerton taking lofty goal to College World Series

The Associated Press

FULLERTON, Calif. — Another dominant performance in the NCAA baseball tournament has Cal State Fullerton back in the College World Series, with the Titans believing they can win it all.

"We're not just going to Omaha to enjoy the Omaha steaks and the people and the environment," coach Dave Serrano said. "We think we have a legitimate chance to win the national championship with the way we're playing right now."

Jared Clark homered and drove in three runs and Noe Ramirez struck out a career-high 10 in eight innings as Cal State Fullerton routed Louisville 11-2 on Saturday to win the super regional.

World Cup qualifying

U.S. shows it can overcome

By RONALD BLUM

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Clint Dempsey flubbed a backheel five minutes in, Honduras pounced on it and the United States fell behind early for the second time in four days.

"Here we go again," U.S. captain Carlos Bocanegra thought.

Only this time, for the first time in 24 years, the Americans came from behind to win a World Cup qualifier. Landon Donovan converted a penalty kick in the 43rd minute and Bocanegra scored on a diving header off Dempsey's knock-down header in the 68th minute Saturday night for a 2-1 victory over Honduras.

"If we don't respond and win this game, we're going to be in a bad position. Now we're halfway through, in second place," Donovan said. "Right now we're in good position."

Seeking its sixth consecutive World Cup berth, the United States (3-1-1) is second in the final round of North and Central American qualifying with 10 points, two behind Costa Rica (4-1). El Salvador (1-1-2) is third with five points, and Honduras (1-2-1) is fourth with four points, one ahead of Mexico (1-3) and two in front of Trinidad and Tobago (0-2-2).

The top three qualify for next year's 32-nation field in South Africa, and the No. 4 team goes to a playoff against the fifth-place team in South America for another berth. After going to the Confederations Cup to play Italy, Brazil and Egypt, Team USA resumes qualifying at Mexico on Aug. 12.

"I think our performances the first five games haven't been great — we've been OK," goalkeeper Tim Howard said, "but the positive is we're still second and we haven't yet reached our potential."

The United States won a qualifier after trailing for the first time since beating Trinidad 2-1 at St. Louis on May 15, 1985. It has lost just one home qualifier in 24 years, 3-2 to Honduras in September 2001 at Washington, D.C. Since then, the U.S. team is 16-0-1 in qualifying at home.

A crowd of 55,647 attended the first qualifier at Soldier Field, site of the 1994 World Cup opener. Although the game was played on American soil, the dominant support was for Honduras, a Central American nation of about 7.6 million. Fans in blue and white appeared to outnumber red-clad American supporters by a 4-1 margin.

Coming off a 3-1 loss at Costa Rica on Wednesday, U.S. coach Bob Bradley changed four starters, inserting right back Jonathan Spector, left back Jonathan Bornstein, midfielder Ricardo Clark and forward Conor Casey. DaMarcus Beasley, Marvell Wynne Jr. and Jose Francisco Torres were benched, and Michael Bradley was suspended for getting his second yellow card of qualifying.

The United States fell behind again when Wilson Palacios picked up Dempsey's bad backheel and dished to Carlos Costly, whose left-footed shot beat Howard from 22 yards.

Donovan, who played one of his best all-around games, made the penalty after a needless handball in the area by Mario Beata. It was Donovan's American-record 11th goal in qualifying and 39th in 110 international appearances.

Donovan started the play for the go-ahead goal with a corner kick that was headed down by Dempsey, who outjumped Hendry Thomas. Bocanegra charged in and, horizontal to the field, headed it in from about 3 yards for his 11th international goal.

when the Razorbacks took a 6-5 lead.

Arkansas (39-22) returns to the CWS for the first time since 2004 when it also eliminated Florida State in a super regional.

LSU 5, Rice 3: At Baton Rouge, La., Louis Coleman pitched eight innings and Derek Hellenihi drove in two runs as the Tigers clinched their 15th CWS appearance Saturday. Coleman scattered nine hits and struck out five. Matty Ott pitched the ninth, striking out Brock Holt with a runner on base to wrap up his 16th save.

North Carolina 9, East Carolina 3: At Chapel Hill, N.C., Dustin Ackley hit a three-run homer and Adam Warren took a shutout into the eighth inning to help North Carolina (47-16) clinch its fourth consecutive trip to Omaha on Sunday.

Tiger tames Memorial

Birdie, birdie finish good for 7-under 65, victory

The Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ohio — Tiger Woods broke away from a four-way tie for the lead Sunday at the Memorial with birdies on his final two holes, the last one a 7-iron that stopped a foot away from the cup for a 7-under 65 and a one-shot victory over Jim Furyk.

With a high-charged rally from a four-shot deficit, Woods revved up the crowd and silenced those who questioned his game heading into his title defense of the U.S. Open at Bethpage Black in two weeks.

He didn't miss a fairway in the final round, the first time he has done that in more than five years. He missed only five fairways all week, his most accurate tournament off the tee since the 1998 Masters.

Woods won the Memorial for a record fourth time, and tournament host Jack Nicklaus greeted him behind the 18th green. It was his second victory this year after missing eight months because of knee surgery, and Woods figured he will get only better.

"I knew it was coming around," Woods said. "I just wasn't as consistent as I needed to be."

Furyk made a 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole for a 69 to finish alone in second.

"I just didn't beat one guy," Furyk said. "It (stinks) finishing second. But he played better. A 7 under on those greens and with the conditions we dealt with, that's pretty spectacular. I just wish you all would just quit (ticking) him off ... so he has to come back and keep proving stuff. I think he answered a lot of questions today."

Woods finished at 12-under 276 and won for the 67th time in his career. The timing could not have been better. He was within one shot of the lead going in to the back nine at Quail Hollow and made nothing better than par for a 72. He played in the final group at The Players Championship, couldn't find a fairway and closed with a 73.

On a firm, fast course under steamy sunshine at Muirfield Village, he was close to perfect. Woods surged into contention with a chip-in for eagle out of gnarly rough behind the 11th green, following through with one hand and eventually using the other to pump his fist. He took his first lead with a two-putt birdie on the par-5 15th.

After a bogey from the bunker on the 16th, Woods was tied with Furyk, Jonathan Byrd and Davis Love III. But not for long.

Woods hit his approach to 9 feet behind the hole on the 17th, and rolled it in for a birdie and the lead. After hitting the fairway with a 3-iron on the 18th, he hit 7-iron from 183 yards and let another raucous cheer indicate the outcome. Woods slapped hands with caddie Steve Williams and tapped in for his best closing round to win since the Dubai Desert Classic last year.

Byrd holed out from 82 yards for eagle at No. 7 for great position, only to give it away with a double bogey from the rough and bunker on the 14th. Still, he had the best chance to catch Woods. Two shots behind, he hit his approach to 4 feet on the 17th, but missed the putt. Byrd finished with a meaningless double bogey for a 72 and tied for third with Mark Wilson (73).

Love, who could have avoided 36-hole U.S. Open qualifying Monday with a victory, got into contention with consecutive birdie putts of about 50 feet, only to miss an 8-foot birdie on the 15th.

He fell out of the hunt with a bogey from the fairway bunker on the 17th, then hitting his tee shot into the water on the 18th and closing with a triple bogey.

LPGA Tour: At Springfield, Ill., In-Kyung Kim finished with a flourish, sinking birdies on two of her final three holes to capture the State Farm Classic by a stroke over Hall of Famer Se Ri Pak. Kim fired a 7-under 65 on Sunday to finish at 17 under, giving the South Korean her second Tour victory along with a big momentum boost heading into the LPGA Championship next week. In the process, she denied Pak (66) her first victory in two years. Hee-Won Han (65), Jee Young Lee (66) and Angela Stanford (67) finished two shots behind Kim.

Champions Tour: At Lakeway, Texas, Bernhard Langer shot a final-round 67 Sunday and cruised to a six-shot victory over Mark O'Meara in the Triton Financial Classic. Langer finished at 15-under 201 on The Hills Country Club course. O'Meara shot a final-round 70. Dana Quigley finished with a 69 to end up another shot back. It was Langer's third Champions Tour victory of the season and sixth overall in less than two years. He was the leading money winner and player of the year on the Champions Tour last year.

Racing roundup

Stewart starts last, takes Pocono for first victory as owner

The Associated Press

LONG POND, Pa. — Tony Stewart won his first Cup points race as a team owner, coming from the rear of the field and taking a late gamble on fuel to win at Pocono Raceway.

The Sprint Cup points leader had to start at the back of Sunday's race because a practice accident forced him into his backup car. Then Stewart figured he could drive the final 41 laps without a pit stop, and it paid off, helping snap a 19-race winless streak dating to last season.

Stewart won the All-Star race last month for Stewart-Haas Racing, and this victory again stamped himself as a true threat to win his third Cup title. "It's just a little different when you're the one that's got to be accountable," Stewart said.

Stewart is the first owner/driver to win a points race since Ricky Rudd at Martinsville in 1998. Carl Edwards was second, followed by David Reutimann, Jeff Gordon and Ryan Newman.

"I didn't think he was going to be a factor," Edwards said of Stewart. "I was sure he was going to run out."

The first Cup points race with double-file restarts finished without a problem. The drivers meeting lasted nearly 30 minutes as last-minute questions were answered on the new restart rules that line up the 43-car field following a yellow.

After a caution, Stewart led the field to the green flag with 45 laps to go in the 500-mile race. His 6-second lead over Edwards with 10 laps left kept getting whittled away as Stewart eased off the breaks and didn't push his car to save fuel.

With a lead in the points standings and a spot in the Chase for the championship all but assured, Stewart could afford to take a risk.

IndyCar Series: Helio Castroneves became a three-time winner at Texas Motor Speedway in Fort Worth when he beat Penske teammate Ryan Briscoe off pit row following the final stop and stayed in front Saturday night.

Briscoe was dominating the race, with more than a 10-second lead when a caution flag on the 150th of the 228 laps bunched the field after an extended stretch of green-flag racing.

Castroneves worked past Marco Andretti after that restart and was on the tail of his teammate when A.J. Foyt IV crashed 15 laps later.

When everybody went into the pits for the final time, Castroneves had a 6-second stop, beating Briscoe and Scott Dixon out by more than a half-second and leading the final 46 laps of green-flag racing.

The winning margin was 0.39 seconds, and Castroneves celebrated as usual by climbing the fence. It was the 16th career victory for Castroneves, whose racing career was in jeopardy earlier this year before a federal jury acquitted him on most tax-evasion charges. The remaining count was thrown out before his Indy triumph.

Briscoe finished second for the second consecutive week, and took over the points lead from Scott Dixon. Marco Andretti was fourth and pole-sitter Dario Franchitti, the Ganassi teammate of Dixon, finished fifth. Danica Patrick was sixth, ending her streak of top-five finishes at four.

NASCAR Nationwide Series: Kyle Busch punished the competition in the Federated Auto Parts 300 at Nashville Superspeedway.

Busch raced to his fourth Nationwide Series victory of the year and ninth overall NASCAR victory this season, easily holding off Brad Keselowski and Carl Edwards. Keselowski, the race winner last year, was second — 0.891 seconds back. Edwards, a three-time Nashville Superspeedway winner, finished third on the 1.333-mile concrete oval.

Formula One: At Istanbul, Brawn GP's Jenson Button won Sunday's Turkish Grand Prix for his sixth victory in seven races. Button overtook pole-sitter Sebastian Vettel on the first lap following a mistake by the Red Bull driver and held on for a 6.7-second victory over Red Bull's Mark Webber. Vettel finished third after opting for a three-stop strategy. Button leads the standings with 61 points. Teammate Rubens Barrichello, who retired after starting third, has 35.

Report says Glavine might file grievance

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Braves general manager Frank Wren said Sunday he had no comment on a report Tom Glavine might file a grievance against the team following his release Wednesday.

Glavine, 43, said Friday he believes he was released for financial reasons and to clear a roster spot for Tommy Hanson, who made his major league debut Sunday against Milwaukee.

Wren, team chairman Terry McGuirk and president John Schuerholz said Glavine was released because they did not believe the left-hander would make a successful return from operations on his elbow and shoulder.

FoxSports.com reported Saturday that Glavine's agent, Gregg Clifton, is exploring filing a grievance. Glavine would have received a $1 million bonus if he had been activated from the disabled list for Sunday's start, as he expected. "I don't believe for a minute that it was totally a performance-related issue, which I'm totally fine with, but I would have appreciated the honesty," Glavine said Friday.

According to the collective-bargaining agreement, players can't be released because of financial reasons.

Foreman's son wins pro debut

KINDER, La. — George Foreman III won his pro boxing debut Saturday, stopping Clyde Weaver at 1:16 of the first round.

Foreman, 26, the son of two-time world heavyweight champion George Foreman, floored Weaver with a left hook to the chin. Earlier, the 6-foot-5, 236-pound Foreman knocked down Weaver (0-2) with a left hook to the body. Less than 30 seconds into the fight, Foreman threw a left hook that landed on Weaver's chin, forcing him to the canvas. Weaver got up, but landed back on the mat again when Foreman hit him with a left hook to the body.

■ Ruslan Chagaev will replace David Haye as Wladimir Klitschko's opponent in a heavyweight title bout June 20. Haye bowed out of the fight Wednesday, saying he had injured his back in training. Klitschko, who holds the IBF and WBO belts, said he wanted to keep the date — a 60,000-ticket sellout at Schalke's soccer stadium in Gelsenkirchen, Germany.

Smoltz sharp in rehab start

PAWTUCKET, R.I. — Boston Red Sox right-hander John Smoltz allowed one hit and one run in six innings for Pawtucket in a rehab start against Durham on Saturday.

Smoltz threw 51 of 74 pitches for strikes, walked two and struck out three. Smoltz, the only pitcher in major league history with at least 200 victories and 150 saves, is continuing his comeback from surgery to repair a torn labrum, a round piece of cartilage. He topped out at 91 mph and retired the last 10 batters he faced.

Furthermore ...

■ At least 19 public-intoxication arrests were made during the debut of the $1.15 billion Cowboys Stadium. Arlington police said they also made one DWI arrest and one assault arrest Saturday. George Strait and Reba McEntire helped open the stadium.

■ All-Pacific 10 point guard Nic Wise, who averaged 15.7 points a game last season will return to Arizona for his senior year and forgo the NBA Draft.

Federer gets his numbers

Swiss star wins French title No. 1 to tie Sampras with 14 majors

By STEVEN WINE
The Associated Press

PARIS — Roger Federer beat Robin Soderling, tied Pete Sampras and won the French Open at last. Undeterred by an on-court intruder, Federer defeated surprise finalist Soderling 6-1, 7-6 (1), 6-4 on Sunday to complete a career Grand Slam and win his 14th major title, matching Sampras' record.

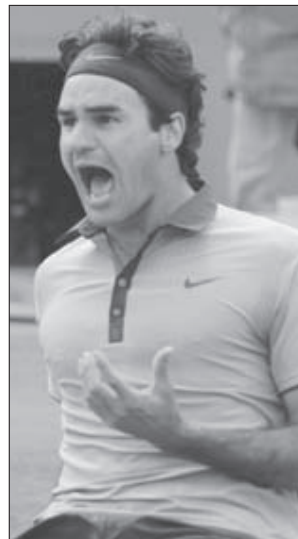

"It's maybe my greatest victory, or certainly the one that removes the most pressure off my shoulders," Federer said. "I think that now and until the end of my career, I can really play with my mind at peace, and no longer hear that I've never won Roland Garros."

On his fourth attempt in Paris, Federer became the sixth man to win all four Grand Slam championships. "Now the question is: Am I the greatest of all time?" Federer said. "We don't know, but I definitely have many things going for me because I've finally won all four Grand Slams, and I'm particularly happy reaching Pete's 14."

Sampras said Federer deserves to be at the top of the all-time list. "I'm obviously happy for Roger," Sampras told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from Los Angeles, where he lives. "Now that he has won in Paris, I think it just more solidifies his place in history as the greatest player that played the game, in my opinion."

Midway through the match, a spectator ran onto the court and tried to put a hat on Federer. That only briefly delayed Federer's march to the title. When the Swiss star hit a service winner on championship point, he fell on his knees to the clay that had vexed him so long, screamed and briefly buried his face in his hands. He was teary by the time he met Soderling at the net, and fans gave Federer a standing ovation as he raised his arms in triumph.

The supportive crowd included Andre Agassi, the most recent man to complete a career Grand Slam when he won the French Open 10 years ago. Agassi presented Federer with the trophy.

CHRISTOPHE ENA/AP

Switzerland's Roger Federer is caught up in the moment after defeating Sweden's Robin Soderling for his first title in the French Open on Sunday.

"I'm so happy for you, man," Agassi said.

"You're the last man to win all four Grand Slams," Federer said. "Now I can relate to what it really feels like. ... It feels good to be for once on the podium as the winner. It's a magical moment." Tears ran down Federer's cheeks as the Swiss national anthem played.

"Roger, really, congrats to you," Soderling said. "You really gave me a lesson in how to play tennis today. And to me you're the greatest player in history. So you really deserved to win this title."

Federer owed Soderling a thank-you for easing his path by upsetting four-time defending champion Rafael Nadal in the fourth round. "I kind of was relieved, because he was going to be the hardest one to beat," Federer said. Nadal defeated Federer in the French Open the past four years, including three consecutive times in the final.

A matchup against the 23rd-seeded Soderling was much more inviting. The Swede had never previously been beyond the third round in a Grand Slam tournament, and he fell to 0-10 against Federer.

"Yesterday, me and my coach were joking," Soderling told Federer during the trophy ceremony. "You've beaten me nine times in a row, and we were joking nobody can beat me 10 times in a row. But we were wrong."

Playing in cool, windy weather and occasional rain, Federer raced to a lead and kept it. Soderling appeared nervous at the start of his first Grand Slam final, and Federer kept him scrambling with groundstrokes to the corners and occasional drop shots.

Then came the day's biggest surprise. The match was between points in the second set when a spectator waving a flag climbed through the photographer's pit and onto Federer's side of the court. Federer backed away toward the backstop, but the fan caught up with him and tried to put a hat on Federer's head. Security seemed slow to react before chasing the man to the other side of the court, and he was tackled, then carried out.

There was silence from the stunned crowd, then the familiar chant of "Ro-ger! Ro-ger!" when the bizarre episode ended. Federer readjusted his headband, Soderling gave him a thumbs-up sign and play resumed. Soderling's strokes steadied, and he pushed the second set to 6-6. But Federer played a brilliant tiebreaker, hitting aces on all four serves, and Soderling could only smile. Federer broke serve again to start the third set and kept that lead the rest of the way.

Federer won his 14th Grand Slam championship at age 27. Sampras, who never reached a French Open final, was 31 when he won his last major title. Federer will try for No. 15 beginning in two weeks at Wimbledon, which he has won five times. He has also won the U.S. Open the past five years, and he has three Australian Open titles.

Besides Federer and Agassi, the other men to win all four Grand Slam tournaments were Fred Perry, Don Budge, Rod Laver and Roy Emerson.

Red Wings crush Pens in Game 5

Detroit needs only one more victory to win Stanley Cup

By IRA PODELL

The Associated Press

DETROIT — The Detroit Red Wings got exactly what they needed: a big victory and long break.

After hearing how tired and beat up they were through four games of the Stanley Cup finals, the defending champions busted out with a devastating display of offense and defense and rolled to a 5-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins on Saturday night that put them a victory away from another championship.

The veteran-laden Red Wings lead the series 3-2 and are closing in on their 12th Stanley Cup title and fifth in 12 seasons. Detroit can wrap this one up Tuesday night in Pittsburgh.

"It's a huge win," Red Wings coach Mike Babcock said. "The biggest part is the extra days off. That's the best thing that we've got to this point."

"We'll be a better team."

Detroit's two-game losing streak in Pittsburgh quickly became a distant memory as the Red Wings returned to the friendly confines of Joe Louis Arena and blew away the supposedly fresher Penguins.

The home team is 5-0 in the rematch of last year's finals, so the Penguins still have that going for them.

"When you don't play well at all, you have nothing to do but improve, and we have to," Pittsburgh captain Sidney Crosby said. "The situation is pretty clear for us. We have to go home and be desperate now."

Pavel Datsyuk made his mark in his first appearance in eight games, notching two assists, drawing a key penalty, and knocking leading scorer Evgeni Malkin to the ice. The Red Wings made the Penguins pay for a lack of discipline by going 3-for-9 on the power play. Detroit was 1-for-10 on the power play going into Game 5.

Datsyuk even shook off a slash from Max Talbot on his sore right foot.

"When I play more, I'm more comfortable," said Datsyuk, who logged 17½ minutes of ice time. "It's a little bit hard to start with the final series when I miss a couple of games, but I'm ready to play more."

Chris Osgood, on the verge of his fourth Stanley Cup championship — third as the Red Wings starting goalie — made 22 saves for his 15th playoff shutout, third on the NHL career list. He earned an assist on Valtteri Filppula's goal for his fifth career playoff point, and improved to 11-4 in the finals.

Detroit held a 29-22 shots advantage, the first time the home team had the edge.

"The other game is three days away so I don't know if [the shut-out] has much bearing on what's going to happen in Pittsburgh," Osgood said. "It's more important for us to get a little break so we can be at full capacity when we go to Pittsburgh."

This series looked firmly in the Red Wings' control after they opened with a pair of 3-1 victories, but the Penguins seized momentum with two 4-2 victories that made Detroit appear worn out.

"We had no jump in the last game when they scored all the goals," Babcock said. "It didn't look like they had much jump when we scored all the goals. It's amazing how tired you look when you're not scoring and they are."

History suggests the Red Wings will hoist the Cup again as 14 of the 19 previous teams to win Game 5 in a series tied 2-2 have prevailed.

Pittsburgh won Game 5 in the Motor City last year in triple overtime to force the series to six games, but then was eliminated at home. The Penguins are 1-5 in Detroit in the past two finals, and Crosby failed to score a goal in all six games.

"We won in Game 5 in overtime last year and we won a regular-season game here, so I think we're pretty confident we can do a job here," Crosby said.

The Red Wings broke it open with four goals in the second period — three in a span of 6:42 — against beleaguered goalie Marc-Andre Fleury, who left after making 16 saves on 21 shots. It wasn't the bouncy end boards that did him in this time, as they tormented him in the first two games, but rather a suddenly potent power play by the Red Wings.

Soldiers: Seahawks praise Tillman, all soldiers than beating a Pro Bowl cornerback on a go route.

Oh, Houshmandzadeh finally made it through "The Weave." He burned friction holes through a sweat shirt and workout T-shirt doing it.

"We're trying to correlate it to football. It's teamwork," Houshmandzadeh said. "But this is different. We screw up, we lose a play, maybe a game. These soldiers screw up, they lose a life."

While getting a preview of the 50-foot walls and ropes of the obstacle course, defensive back Jordan Babineaux called out, "I'm getting dizzy already! Heat exhaustion!"

Millionaire NFL players crawling through the same sawdust as privates who make a few hundred dollars a month is unique, but not unprecedented.

After two-plus hours under the hot sun, the Seahawks were reminded of a former NFL colleague who made a heroic and ultimately tragic career change.

"It's flippin' crazy, what Pat Tillman did," Houshmandzadeh said, before boarding an air-conditioned, chartered bus that took the Seahawks back to their facility. "It's unbelievable. It's literally unbelievable, man, to know what he did is what you're out here doing — only 100 times harder."

Tillman is the former safety for the Arizona Cardinals who gave up his NFL career by volunteering for the Army as an enlisted soldier. He became a Ranger, deployed to Afghanistan and was killed there in 2004.

"It's unbelievable," Houshmandzadeh said again. "There's no way you can really have an appreciation, being out here, for what he did."

Seahawks assistant coach Larry Marmie, born in 1942, impressed his players by being one of the only coaches to go through each of the obstacles. Marmie was Tillman's position coach and then his defensive coordinator with the Cardinals.

Marmie and Seahawks safety Brian Russell were talking about Tillman minutes after they finished the confidence course.

"I was shocked when he first told me," Marmie said of Tillman's decision to give up NFL riches for the life the Seahawks got only a taste of Thursday. "But after I had a chance to talk to him and I thought about it, I could just see him doing something like that."

Despite the tragic ending, Marmie doesn't regret not talking Tillman out of leaving the NFL.

"Pat did what he wanted to do. It was his calling, his passion," Marmie said. "I just have the regret that he didn't come home."

Going home, of course, is what the Seahawks got to do after their day in the Army.

"Talking to them, the biggest sacrifice is the stress on the families," quarterback Matt Hasselbeck said. "We have it tough in training camp, being away from our families for four weeks. These guys are doing tours in Iraq and Afghanistan for 15 months."

Hasselbeck spent his morning with the 555th combat Engineer Brigade, manning a machine gun while on a simulator clearing improvised explosive devices with teammates. Hasselbeck called it an "adrenaline rush." He spent the afternoon walking the courses with a pack on his back — "I'm the medic," he joked. After missing the majority of last season with a back injury, the Seahawks don't want to risk anything.

"It's amazing, to see what a day is in these soldiers' lives. And this is probably one of their easier days, hosting us," Hasselbeck said.

None of the soldiers said they wanted to trade lives with their privileged NFL visitors, defensive tackle Craig Terrill said, "and that was the coolest thing of the day."

"They are all very proud of their jobs," he said. "This is an all-voluntary military. No one forced them to do what they do. And they love it."

Toronto's Roy Halladay scattered seven hits in beating Kansas City 4-0 on Sunday, becoming baseball's first 10-game winner.

Jays' Halladay wins 10th

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Roy Halladay pitched a seven-hitter to become the first 10-game winner in the major leagues as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Kansas City Royals 4-0 on Sunday.

Aaron Hill and Lyle Overbay homered as Toronto won the rubber game of the weekend series.

Halladay needed just 97 pitches to record his 43rd career complete game and 12th career shutout. He was coming off a career-high 133 pitches in a complete-game victory over the Los Angeles Angels in his previous start.

The right-hander allowed seven singles in winning his seventh straight decision. He struck out six and walked none.

Halladay, the 2003 AL Cy Young Award winner, has gone at least seven innings in each of his 13 starts this season and has not lost since April 21, when Texas beat him 5-4.

Halladay's only trouble came in the seventh, when the Royals loaded the bases with one out on singles by Mike Jacobs, Mark Teahen and Alberto Callaspo. Halladay got out of it quickly, striking out Miguel Olivo on three pitches and getting Mitch Maier on a first-pitch grounder.

Kansas City, which snapped an eight-game losing streak by beating Toronto on Saturday, lost for the 21st time in 27 games.

Overbay extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a towering solo homer in the second inning that bounced off the center-field restaurant. It was his seventh homer of the season and second in three games.

Hill snapped an 0-for-25 slump with a two-run home run to left in the third inning as the Blue Jays sent Kyle Davies to his fifth straight loss. Davies (2-6) allowed four runs and nine hits in eight innings. He is 0-5 with a 5.31 ERA in his past seven starts.

Despite the loss, Kansas City took the season series from the Blue Jays 5-3.

Since 2003, Halladay is 52-19 with a 3.17 ERA when pitching following a Blue Jays loss.

Rivera bounces back as Yanks top Rays

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mariano Rivera bounced back from a poor outing against Tampa Bay, and the New York Yankees played small ball to rally for three runs in the eighth inning for a 4-3 victory on Sunday over the Rays.

Nick Swisher hit the 100th home run at the new Yankee Stadium, helping Joe Girardi earn his 200th victory as a manager.

A bases-loaded walk and an error plated the first two New York runs in the eighth, and Hideki Matsui beat out a potential double-play grounder to drive in the go-ahead run.

Then Rivera pitched a perfect ninth, getting pinch-hitter Evan Longoria on a grounder to second for the final out and his 13th save.

Girardi ordered Rivera to intentionally walk Longoria on Saturday in the Rays' four-run ninth inning of a 9-7 victory, and the star closer said afterward that he wanted to face the Tampa Bay slugger.

Rangers 6, Red Sox 3: Nelson Cruz homered and finished with three hits, helping visiting Texas win a series from Boston for the first time in 12 years.

The Rangers had 12 hits one day after Jon Lester flirted with a perfect game before settling for a two-hitter. Cruz's 17th homer and 10th in 17 games drove in Texas' final run.

Cruz doubled and scored in the third, tripled and scored in the fifth and hit a solo homer in the seventh off Hideki Okajima that ended a 12-inning scoreless streak for Boston relievers.

Tigers 9, Angels 6: Clete Thomas' grand slam broke an eighth-inning tie and Detroit took advantage of an error by first baseman Kendry Morales to beat Los Angeles.

The Angels led 5-4 going into the bottom of the eighth, but Jose Arredondo (1-3) walked Ryan Raburn and Adam Everett with one out. Jason Bugler came on and walked Curtis Granderson, loading the bases.

Placido Polanco flied to shallow center, and Raburn bluffed an attempt to score. Gary Matthews Jr. threw toward the plate but the ball was misplayed by Morales, the cutoff man, allowing Raburn to score the tying run.

Magglio Ordonez drew the 15th walk of the game, loading the bases again, and Thomas followed with his first career slam.

Indians 8, White Sox 4: Rookies Chris Gimenez and Luis Valbuena hit consecutive home runs off former Cleveland ace Bartolo Colon, and Victor Martinez and Shin-soo Choo also hit back-to-back homers off Colon as the Indians built a 6-0 lead. The Indians won a road series for only the second time this season.

The White Sox have been outscored 35-17 in going 2-5 on a homestand that concludes with a five-game series against first-place Detroit.

In Saturday games:

Mariners 2, Twins 1: Ken Griffey Jr. drove in Ichiro Suzuki with a two-out double in the eighth inning. A day after his club-record 27-game hitting streak ended, Suzuki went 3-for-4 against the Twins, including a two-out RBI double in the fifth that tied it 1-1.

Suzuki chopped a single over the head of left-hander Sean Henn (0-1) to open the eighth. Russell Branyan struck out and Adrian Beltre popped up before Griffey came through with his tiebreaking hit, the 511th double of his career.

Chris Jakubauskas (4-5) got two outs in the eighth to win it for the Mariners, who improved to 15-12 in a major league-high 27 one-run games this season. David Aardsma worked the ninth for his ninth save in 10 chances.

White Sox 4, Indians 2: Josh Fields homered and Gavin Floyd pitched into the seventh inning, helping the host White Sox end a four-game skid.

Paul Konerko had a sacrifice fly in the first to end Chicago's scoreless drought at 23 innings.

Floyd (4-5) allowed two runs — one earned — and five hits in 6²/₃ innings. He struck out seven and walked one.

Fields put the White Sox ahead with a two-out solo shot in the fourth inning. It was his third homer of the season and first since May 5 at Kansas City.

Bobby Jenks pitched a scoreless ninth for his 13th save.

Indians starter Jeremy Sowers (1-3) allowed three runs — two earned — and five hits in six innings.

Red Sox 8, Rangers 1: Jon Lester retired the first 19 batters he faced and finished with a two-hitter. David Ortiz homered for host Red Sox.

Michael Young doubled into the gap in left-center with one out in the seventh inning to break up Lester's bid for a perfect game. Young also singled in the ninth.

Ortiz, mired in a season-long slump, connected for the second time this season and first since May 20. Mike Lowell also homered — after having his double overturned by video review.

Lester (5-5), who threw a no-hitter on May 19, 2008 against Kansas City, struck out 11 and walked two. It was his third career complete game.

Derek Holland (1-3) lost it.

Tigers 2, Angels 1: Edwin Jackson threw a four-hitter for his second career complete game as the host Tigers ended a four-game skid. Jackson (6-3) improved to 5-1 with a 0.76 ERA in his past six starts. He struck out five and walked one, throwing 109 pitches.

Kelvinn Escobar (0-1) went five innings for the Angels in his first start since 2007, allowing two runs and four hits. The right-hander missed last season after elbow surgery.

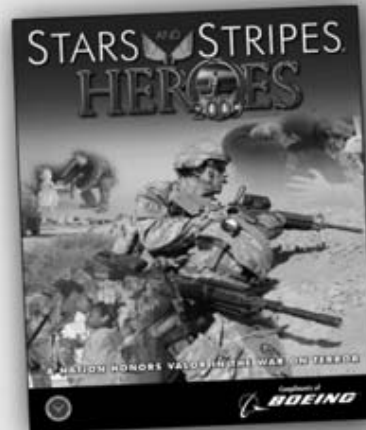

Athletics 9, Orioles 4: Jason Giambi hit a three-run double, helping rookie Trevor Cahill end a three-start losing streak as the host Athletics won their season-best fifth straight game. Orlando Cabrera and Adam Kennedy each doubled twice and drove in two runs. They hit back-to-back doubles during a four-run fourth to chase O's starter Jason Berken.

Oakland's first seven hits were doubles, and the final total of eight matched a club record.

Hernandez goes seven as Mets cruise after a wild first inning

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Livan Hernandez allowed four singles in seven innings and the New York Mets scored five first-inning runs in a 7-0 victory over the Washington Nationals on Sunday.

Hernandez (5-1) walked four and struck out four to win for the fifth time in seven starts. The right-hander has won seven consecutive games against the Nationals and improved to 10-5 lifetime against his former team.

The Nationals lost for the 10th time in 12 games and dropped to 2-7 against the Mets this season.

Relievers Pedro Feliciano and Bobby Parnell got the Mets through the eighth and Francisco Rodriguez completed the five-hitter, completing New York's third shutout.

The Mets, limited to four runs in splitting the first two games of the weekend series, took advantage of Craig Stammen's wildness in the first to build a 5-0 lead.

Leadoff hitter Alex Cora drew a four-pitch walk and scored on Fernando Martinez's double over the head of center fielder Elijah Dukes. Martinez went to third on Carlos Beltran's groundout and David Wright walked. Martinez scored on a wild pitch as Wright stole second and Daniel Murphy's RBI single made it 3-0.

Murphy advanced on Ryan Church's double and scored on Brian Schneider's sacrifice fly. Stammen then uncorked another run-scoring wild pitch to cap New York's big first.

Stammen (0-2) blanked the Mets over the next four innings, but the damage was done. The rookie right-hander gave up six hits, walked two and struck out two.

Wright added a two-out RBI single in the seventh and Beltran doubled in a run in the ninth.

Livan Hernandez continued his mastery over his former club, allowing four singles over seven innings Sunday in the New York Mets' 7-0 victory over the Washington Nationals.

Rockies top Cards

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Ubaldo Jimenez threw eight innings of four-hit ball and Paul Phillips drove in three runs as the streaking Colorado Rockies beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-2 on Sunday.

Phillips had a career-best four hits, including his first homer since 2006. Troy Tulowitzki, who missed four games with a bruised left hand, contributed two hits and an RBI.

The Rockies have scored 38 runs in their first four-game winning streak of the year and are 6-4 under manager Jim Tracy after going 18-28 under Clint Hurdle.

Albert Pujols had a rare two-run sacrifice fly in the first inning for the Cardinals, who have a mere three runs and nine hits in the past two games. Joel Poinciro (5-6) allowed three runs in five innings after skipping a start due to back spasms.

The Cardinals have lost seven of 10 and scored three or fewer runs in seven of those games.

Jimenez (4-6) retired 17 in a row at one stretch and struck out a season-high nine.

NL roundup

Jones, feeling chipper, leads Braves by Brewers

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Chipper Jones had four hits, including two homers, and matched a career high with five RBIs as the Atlanta Braves rallied past Milwaukee 8-7 on Sunday to prevent the Brewers' first series sweep in Atlanta.

The Braves, trailing 7-5, scored three runs in the eighth off Carlos Villanueva (2-4). The rally allowed Tommy Hanson to avoid a loss in his major league debut.

Brian McCann's pinch-hit double off Villanueva drove in Martin Prado. Nate McLouth added a tying double to center and scored the go-ahead run on Yunel Escobar's single to left.

The NL Central-leading Brewers got two two-run homers from Ryan Braun.

Eric O'Flaherty (1-0) pitched a scoreless eighth for Atlanta. Mike Gonzalez pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

The Braves led 5-3 before Braun and Mike Cameron hit two-run homers off Hanson during a four-run sixth inning. Braun hit another two-run homer in the fourth.

Hanson, the Braves' top pitching prospect, retired the first 10 batters before fading. The right-hander gave up six hits and seven runs in six innings.

Jones, who left Saturday night's game with dizziness, returned with a season-high four hits and an intentional walk. He drove in a run with a first-inning triple.

Manny Parra gave up eight hits and five runs in 5²/₃ innings. He walked two batters and struck out four and had a run-scoring double off Hanson in the fifth.

The Brewers shut out the Braves in the first two games of the series, the second time this season Atlanta has suffered back-to-back shutout losses.

The Braves ended their streak of 22 scoreless innings in the first when Escobar hit a single and scored when Jones' sinking liner skipped past Cameron in center field for a triple. Cameron tried to make the catch and then had to turn around and run back toward the wall.

Jones' homer gave Atlanta a 2-0 lead in the third.

Astros 6, Pirates 4: Matt Kata scored from second base on Miguel Tejada's infield single, snapping a seventh-inning tie as host Houston beat Pittsburgh.

Pirates shortstop Ramon Vazquez went to the turf to field Tejada's grounder, fumbled the ball and tried to get it to second baseman Freddy Sanchez for an inning-ending forceout. But they couldn't connect and Kata kept running, putting Houston ahead 4-3.

Humberto Quintero, who went 3 for 4 with two RBIs, had an RBI single and Jason Michaels added a ground-rule double in the eighth to make it 6-3.

LaTroy Hawkins allowed a run in the ninth before getting his eighth save in 10 tries.

In Saturday games:

Dodgers 3, Phillies 2 (12): Brad Lidge gave up a tying home run to pinch-hitter Rafael Furcal with one out in the ninth inning for his second blown save in less than 24 hours, and Andre Ethier hit his second homer of the game with two out in the 12th.

Ethier, who had a game-ending two-run double off Lidge in the ninth inning of Friday night's 4-3 victory, sent a full-count offering from Chad Durbin (1-2) over the center-field fence to complete his fourth career multihomer game. In the fourth, he drove a 1-2 pitch into the right-field pavilion off Joe Blanton.

Cory Wade (1-3) pitched two perfect innings of relief for the Dodgers, whose bullpen leads the majors with 17 victories.

Brewers 3, Braves 0: Prince Fielder's third two-homer game of the season gave visiting Milwaukee all the offense it needed. Jeff Suppan (4-4) gave up six hits in 5¹/₃ innings as the Brewers won their second straight shutout over Atlanta and extended the Braves' scoreless-innings streak to 22. The Braves have lost three straight.

Trevor Hoffman, Milwaukee's fourth reliever, pitched the ninth for his 15th straight save.

Fielder gave Milwaukee a 1-0 lead with his 14th homer, off Javier Vazquez (4-5) in the fifth.

Nationals 7, Mets 1: John Lannan threw his first career complete game for the host Nationals. Lannan (3-5) allowed an unearned run and four hits, facing the minimum number of batters through the first seven innings. He was helped by a franchise-record-tying five double plays.

Adam Dunn, Elijah Dukes and Nick Johnson homered for the Nationals, who had lost three straight and nine of 10.

Washington chased John Maine (5-4) before he could record an out in the fifth inning of a game that lasted just 2 hours.

Rockies 10, Cardinals 1: Ian Stewart homered twice and matched a career high with five RBIs as Aaron Cook beat the host Cardinals for the first time.

Stewart hit a three-run shot to right on a full count in the fourth and a two-run shot to left-center on a 2-0 pitch in the sixth, both off Todd Wellemeyer (5-6).

Cook (4-3) allowed a run on four hits in eight innings, facing no batters with runners in scoring position.

Clint Barmes added a three-run homer in the ninth off Blake Hawksworth, making his major league debut.

Pirates 6, Astros 4: Paul Maholm pitched seven innings and drove in a run with an infield single for Pittsburgh. Jack Wilson doubled twice and drove in a run and Andrew McCutchen delivered a two-run single for the Pirates, who snapped a five-game losing streak at Houston.

Adam LaRoche and Andy LaRoche each had two hits and an RBI.

Maholm (4-2) allowed four runs and eight hits for his first victory since April 22. Matt Capps finished for his 13th save in 15 tries.

Roy Oswalt (2-3) gave up six runs and nine hits in six innings.

Marlins 5, Giants 4: Hanley Ramirez hit two of Florida's five doubles, leading Andrew Miller and the host Marlins. Down 5-2, the Giants loaded the bases in the ninth against closer Matt Lindstrom. Reliever Leo Nunez gave up Aaron Rowand's two-run single before striking out Edgar Renteria to end it.

Miller (2-2) allowed one earned run and four hits in 5²/₃ innings. He won for the first time in four starts. Nunez got his second save.

Jonathan Sanchez (2-5) was the loser.

Reds 4, Cubs 3 (11): Jay Bruce scored from third, beating Mike Fontenot's high throw home, as the host Reds beat the Cubs. Bruce walked off Sean Marshall (3-5) leading off the 11th, went to second on a wild pitch and to third on Alex Gonzalez's sacrifice. After an intentional walk to Ryan Hanigan, pinch-hitter Adam Rosales hit a chopper to Fontenot at third. His throw to catcher Geovany Soto was high, allowing Bruce to score.

Fontenot's throwing error in the first led to three unearned runs off Ryan Dempster.

Nick Masset (3-0) walked a batter in two innings.

Matt Maloney, making his major league debut, pitched six innings for Cincinnati and singled in his first plate appearance.

Padres 6, Diamondbacks 4: Tony Gwynn Jr. reached base a career-high five times and scored the go-ahead run in the six-run sixth inning as the host Padres snapped a four-game skid. Gwynn had a career-high three walks, a single, a double and a stolen base.

Kevin Correia (2-4) rebounded from a shaky first inning, holding Arizona to two runs and five hits in six innings. Heath Bell gave up one run on a walk, a wild pitch and two grounders in the ninth but got his 16th save.

Rookie Daniel Schlereth (0-2) faced four batters and failed to get an out, allowing four runs on one hit, two walks and a hit batter.

Seattle Seahawks receiver T.J. Houshmandzadeh makes his way through an exercise in which participants alternate going over and under logs set on an A-frame at Fort Lewis, Wash., on Thursday. Seahawks players tackled the obstacle course on which soldiers train before deploying to Iraq and Afghanistan.

Seahawks humbled by day of Army training

FORT LEWIS, Wash. — T.J. Houshmandzadeh is used to manhandling NFL defensive backs. That skill made him the most coveted wide receiver in the free-agent market this offseason.

But giant logs stacked into an A-frame, forming an apex 40 feet above sawdust? Those logs manhandled Houshmandzadeh on Thursday.

"What do I do now?" the 6-foot-2, 203-pound Seattle Seahawks receiver cried from atop "The Weave."

It was the first test in a confidence course, on which soldiers train before leaving for Iraq and Afghanistan at one of the Army's most active domestic posts.

Fort Lewis is about an hour south of Seahawks headquarters, and about a world away from the opulent, lakeside training facility in suburban Seattle.

Beads of sweat dripped off Houshmandzadeh's goatee and into the sawdust. With green pines stretching into the sunny sky, the Seahawks spent this 90-degree day with 16 units participating in operations and exercises to emphasize the similarities in the team concepts of the NFL and the Army.

Houshmandzadeh spent his morning with combat medics carrying fictitiously wounded colleagues under 2-foot-high barbed wire amid simulated gunfire. After lunch, Houshmandzadeh was trying to weave his body over and under a series of horizontal logs to the top of the A-frame and back down.

He got up easily. Getting across without falling and embarrassing — if not hurting himself — in front of more than 50 other Seahawks and dozens of soldiers running the course or cheering them on? That proved more difficult
